SUMMER SEASON ON

Hundreds Were ta Popurlar Lumina and The Hotels Last Night.

Library of Congress

T [illegible] VERY HEAVY

Suburban Cars Taxed to Their Utmost Capacity—Ball Room at Lumina Crowded with Dancers—Extension Used for First Time.

The unprecedented travel to Wrighsville Beach of yesterday is sufficient evidence that the long delayed summer season has at last made its appearance, and from now on, the rush and excitement of the Seashore life may be expected in every phase. It is estimated that more than two thousand people were transported to the beach yesterday by the Consolidated Campany and the expeditious and careful manner in which the patrons of the company were transferred, excited many favorable comments.

Early in the afternoon, the hundreds of people in the city, released for a half holiday, wended their way to the beach, and the travel continued with increasing volume until late in the evening. A feature of the evening was a train of four electric cars which was composed of the two new cars and two others of the largest capacity, which left the Princess street junction at 8:30 o'clock, each of the four cars being crowded to its fullest capacity. These two new cars are of the same size and type as car 37, the largest car on the line. They were built by the J. G. Brill Company, of Philadelphia, and seat 68 passengers each. With the addition of these two cars, the company now has nine cars of the suburban type. This means that they can run a three car train of motor cars every half hour, or a train of four cars can be run every half hour if necessary, by using the three trailers.

Sufficient preparation was made by the company to bring back to the city the large number of people who spent the evening at the beach and no one was inconvenienced in the least degree.

At Lumina the crowd was so enormous that it was found necessary to use the half completed extension to the handsome pavilion so that room could be provided for all at the pavilion. A conservative estimate of the crowd at the popular place of amusement during the evening places the number at 1,000. The extension at Lumina adds four thousand feet of floor space and it will contribute greatly to the pleasure and convenience of the patrons and frequenters of the People's Pleasure Palace.

The handsome ball room floor was crowded with dancers throughout the evening, and the dancing was continued until the last car left the beach.

All the hotels on the beach received quite a number of guests during yesterday and many engagements for rooms have been made within the last day or two. The managements of the various hostelries are now of the opinion that the dull season is at an end and that numbers of guests will be received from now on.

The Consolidated Company expects good travel to the beach today. All the cars will be in operation and there will be room for everybody. At Lumina there will be two concerts, one in the afternoon and the other in the evening.

The special Carolina Place and Delgado car will be placed in operation today and it will be run on a half hour schedule, leaving the city, and the suburban points every half hour, and between the hours that the suburban cars leave. This of course means that both suburbs will have a fifteen minute schedule connecting them with the city.

The programme for the afternoon concert at Lumina is as follows:

DENTISTS ARE TO MEET

Will Gather at Morehead City This Week to Examine Applicants for License to Practice—Dr. J. E. Matthews Will Attend.

Dr. J. E. Matthews will leave this morning for Morehead City to attend the annual meeting of the North Carolina Board of Dental Examiners, which organization will gather during the coming week. It is expected that the annual session to be held will be of a most profitable nature and the most successful session in the history of the organization is anticipated.

In addition to the transaction of the regular business of the association, the examination of applicants for the practice of dentistry, will be held in Morehead City, June 24th, 25th and 26th.

Written examinations in all the regular college branches will be required also practical work in both operative and mechanical dentistry. As an instance of the high standard which is now being maintained by the association before license is granted, it may be stated that only graduates of reputable dental colleges are admitted to the examinations, it being necessary for each applicant to exhibit his diploma before he is allowed to register for examinations.

Dr. Matthews will be out of the city the greater part of the week as he is a member of the examining board which is composed of the following prominent dentists in the State: Dr. V. E. Turner, of Raleigh, president; Dr. R. H. Jones of Winston, secretary; Dr. S. P. Hilliard, of Rocky Mount; Dr. J. E. Matthews, of Wilmington; Dr. C. A. Bland, of Charlotte, and Dr. E. J. Tucker, of Roxboro.

POLICE EXCURSION.

Officers Will Have Jolly Outing At Carolina Beach Thursday.

Everyone seems to want the police force to have a "bully" time on their annual outing at Carolina Beach next Thursday, and to make it a time long to be remembered by them. Mr. F. Titmas, proprietor of the Gem Studio, No. 114 Market street, has offered one dozen cabinet photos to the officer making the best score at the target shoot they are to have at the Beach in which every officer will shoot a round from his own "old trusty." Of course the lucky one will have the photos taken with his new uniform on, and if luck is with him to such an extent that he also gets the hat offered by Mr. A. T. Piver, he will be adorned with that, too.

And last, but not least, the genial proprietors of the Theatorium have stated that Thursday morning they will throw the doors of their popular place open to the officers, their families and friends, from 9:30 to 11:30 A. M., the time of departure of the last boat for the Beach.

If there are any merchants who wish to make donations of anything to further the pleasure of the policement on that day, they are requested to call up the city hall and they will be promptly attended to.

REPRODUCTION OF RACES.

Moving Pictures Will Be Made of Events in Firemen's Tournament.

Mr. W. P. Monroe, secretary of the committee on arrangements for the firemen's tournament, which is to be held here shortly, received yesterday at letter from Mr. S. Lubin, the inventor and patentee of moving picture machines and films, which stated that Mr. Lubin will send a photographer here during the tournament, to take views of the principal races. The views will then be reproduced as films and as soon as they can be gotten ready, will be exhibited to the public at the Bijou theatre. The views will, of course, be of an interesting nature, and when on exhibition, will undoubtedly prove to be very popular.

Another letter was also received yesterday by Mr. Munroe from the Elizabeth City fire department, which stated that the department at that town will be well represented at the tournament, and that the firemen there are looking forward to their trip to this city with a great deal of pleasure.

HOSPITAL NOTES.

Lonnie Snipes Doing Nicely—Joseph North Died Yesterday.

Lonnie Snipes, who was operated on for appendicitis Friday at the hospital, was reported last night to be getting on nicely and his speedy recovery is almost sure, as the hospital surgions stated that the danger period is nearly passed.

Joseph North, the colored man who was so badly burned with gasoline Thursday night, died at the hospital yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, he having inhaled some of the fire which made his recovery impossible. The body of the unfortunate negro, will be interred this afternoon.

MONARCHS WON GAME

Gave Rattlers a Coat Whitewash in Prettily Played Game Yesterday Afternoon.

Y. M. C. A. BEAT GIANTS

Games Were Witnessed By a Large Crowd—Much Interest Taken in Both Contests—Standing of the Clubs.

Monarchs, 3; Rattlers, 0.
Y. M.| C. A., 8; Giants, 1.

The above brief summaries tell the stories of the results in the games of baseball in the City League, which were played yesterday afternoon at Hilton Park. The first score given above pleased everyone on the grounds to the fullest extent, with the possible exception of those who received the coat of white wash from the Monarchs, the latter aggregation having been regarded as an easy mark for the past season, and for the first part of the present season, on account of the fact that Dame Fortune has always seemed to regard them with an unfavorable eye,yesterday being the first time she has allowed the wearers of the crowns to wrest a game from their opponents.

And the Monarchs—well, after the games each and every member of the team wore the smile that refuses to be erased. They were confident before they entered the game that they would be victorious, but the idea that they would shut out their opponents, probably never occurred to them for a moment. The spectators were all heartily glad that the Monarchs secured their well earned victory and hope that this may be only the first of many that they will secure.

The first game was started promptly at 3 o'clock between the Giants and the Y. M. C. A.'s, and the game was an easy victory for the last mentioned team, the final score as given above being 8 to 1. In the first two innings the winners secured a lead of 7 runs, which was more than sufficient to win the contest. At no stage of the game were the Giants dangerous, and the victors after piling up the score, played along contentedly, satisfied with preventing the losers from securing any run, other than the lone tally sent across the plate.

The pitching of Duls was easily the feature of the game. The Y. M. C. A. team has not yet lost a game, and his pitching has excited a great deal of favorable comment. The Y. M. C. A. team is playing at a fast clip at present and if the other teams do not put forth their best efforts it is likely that the association team will clinch the lead in the race for the pennant.

The line up of the teams in the first game was as follows:

Y. M. C. A.—L. King, catch; Duls, pitch; Thees, first base; Brinkley second base; U. King, third base; W. King, short stop; Bergen, left field; Belden, centre field; Irfving, right field.

Giants—Seifert, catch; Gore, pitch; McClellan, first base; Bush, second base; Kendall, third base; Lacy, short stop; Brittain, left field; Hall, centre field; Andrews, right field.

Score by innings— .. R H E
Y M C A..2 5 0 1 0 0 0 0x— 8 8 3
Giants ...0 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 0— 1 8 9

Summary: Batteries, Y. M. C. A., Duls and King; Giants, Gore and Seifert. Base on balls, Duls 1; struck out, Duls 5, Gore 5; passed balls, King 2; two base hits, Irving and Brittain.

Second Game.

A general idea of the second game is given in the opening of this article. The Monarchs played as if their thrones were in danger and they certaily succeeded in repulsing and routing the enemy. The principal factor in winning the engagement was a certain tall young son of the Emerald Isle who is known to every baseball "fan" under the appellation of "Porp" Green. In the language of the base ball artist, this person who occupied the rifle pit, for the Monarchs "had everything" and his pitching was easily the feature of the contest. The Rattlers played hard ball throughout the game, but for one time they were simply out classed.

After nine innings of fast consistent ball playing, the game was ended with the Monarchs the victors, by the close score of 3 to 0.

The teams were pitted against each other as follows:

Monarchs: Moore, catch; Green, pitch; Hines and Hicks, first base; Smith, second base; Gore, M., third base; McKoy, short stop; Newkirk, left field; Wood and Hines, center field; Gore, W., right field.

Score by innings— .. R H E
Monarchs .0 0 2 1 0 0 0 0 0—3 8 6
Rattlers ..0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0 2 3

Summary: Batteries, Monarchs, Green and Moore; Rattlers, Salling and Cashwell; struck out by Salling 6, Green 8; base on balls, Green 3; hit by pitched ball, Salling 1.

Both games were umpired very satisfactorily by Mr. Robert Davis.

The Star is requested to state that out of town teams wishing to arrange games to be played here with the City League teams, may secure dates by communicating with Mr. J. Ed. Smith, president of the league No. 408 North Front street, Wilmington, N. C.

The standing of the clubs is as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	P. C.
Y. M. C. A.	4	0	1000
Rattlers	2	2	500
Giants	1	3	250
Monarchs	1	3	250

SESSION IS CONCLUDED

Annual Meeting of Merchants Association of North Carolina Has Adjourned—Mr. Henderson Cole, of This City a Delegate.

Mr. Henderson Cole, of the Wilmington Furniture Company, has returned from Greensboro, where he attended the anual session of the United Merchants Associations of North Carolina. Mr. Cole was the only delegate from this city to the convention, but during the progress of the session an address was delivered by Mr. D. L. Gore, of this city, who was extended a special invitation to do so by those in charge of the programme of the convention.

The Association convened in the Benbow Hotel at Greensboro Tuesday evening, and continued in session until Friday morning. During the progress of the convention much business of importance was transacted.

Mr. Gore's speech was highly complimented by all who heard it. There were about 125 delegates in attendance, representing the business interests in every section of the State, and Mr. Gore was heartily congratulated by all present after he had finished his remarks.

Another speech which was listened to with great interest was that delivered by the Hon. Ashley Horne, of Clayton, who is in the race for the gubernatorial nomination at the next State election. Mr. Horne is a selfmade business man and his speech was thoroughly practical and interesting. Mr. Cole states that Mr. Horne, during the convention, received assurances from many of the prominent men present that he would receive their support in his race for the governorship.

Among other important matters transacted during the convention was the arrival at the decision to raise a fund of $5,000 with which to fight railroads which are now discriminating against various North Carolina cities and towns, in favor of places in the State of Virginia.

Another important action taken at the session was the decision arrived at to recommend to the merchants of the State the advisability of forming a fire insurance association.

The next session of the association will be held at Charlotte the second week in June, 1908.

COAST LINE HEARD

Superintendent Newell Appeared Before State Corporation Commission at Raleigh.

HOURS FOR TELEGRAPHERS

Operators on Coast Line Not Overworked and Twelve Hours on Duty Are Not Excessive. Held for Infanticide.

(Special Star Telegram.)

Raleigh, N. C., June 22.—The greater part of the morning session of the North Carolina Corporation Commission for the hearing on petition of the Southern, the Atlantic Coast Line and the Seaboard Air Line for deferring the operation of the eight hour law for railway telegraph operators until next March and allowing the operators to be worked 12 hours, as taken up with the examination of T. J. Witherspoon, railway operator for the Southern at Greensboro. He was introduced in the interest of the telegraphers with a view to showing that eight hours is full long for the operators to be on duty in view of the duties encumbent on them if the public safety and anything like fairness to the operators are considered. There was a lengthy cross-examination on the part of the railroad companies to show that if the eight hour law were put into effect that there would not be operators available to perform the service and many blocks in the charter would be left open and travel thereby delayed and the lives of passengers and trainmen endangered. Mr. Witherspoon contended, however, that he believed the requisite number of additional operators would be available.

Most of the afternoon was taken up with the testimony of Superintendent W. H. Newell, of the Atlantic Coast Line, relative to conditions existing with train operators on his road. He testified that block houses practically are all now of standard size and equipment; that the operators at numerous small stations, which that company's petition asks to be exempted from the eight hour law, are not overworked and twelve hours not excessive. Himself an operator four years, he knew their duties. Asked about chances for promotion for operators, he said they were fifty per cent better than when he was in the service. He stated that nine superintendents with the Coast Line were operators, and that the general officers of the company, except one, were practical telegraphers. He said that loyalty to the company's interests was an important factor in promotion and he feared the spirit to do just so much and no more than discharging duties to the letter of a rule rather than inteested liberal effort, was threatening against the best interests of telegraphers in this connection. The Commission took a recess until Monday morning.

Held for Infanticide.

Elvira Powell, the negro woman held in jail for several weeks on the charge of being implicated in the murder of a new born baby, the child of Rosa Johnson, a comely nineteeen year old white woman here, was given a hearing before Justice Separks today and committed to prison without bail to be tried at the July term of Wake Court. The Johnson girl is also being held in jail, although she pleads absolute ignorance of the purpose of the old negro woman and the reputed father of the child to have it killed. This young man, well known in Raleigh, a son of an ex-police officer of the city, is still in hiding, having left the State about the time the case developed.

Married Life of 58 Years.

Mr. and Mrs. David L. Royster, of this city, last evening celebrated their fifty-eighth wedding anniversary by entertaining their children and their families and a number of intimate friends. The children are Vitruvious Royster, deputy clerk of Wake County Superior Court, Mrs. Geo. E. Iden, Mrs. K. W. Merritt and Misses Nellie and Gertrude Royster.

MAYOR'S COURT YESTERDAY.

Man and Woman Sent to Roads for Disorderly Conduct.

The trial of John Wesley, the negro who was shot in Terry's Alley several days ago, took place in the Mayor's Court yesterday, he having recovered sufficiently from his wounds to appear at trial, and he was sent to the county roads for 30 days on the charge of disorderly conduct. Martha Perry, the woman at whose house the shooting took place was sent to the county farm for the same number of days. The original warrants against them charged them with assault with a deadly weapon, but the stories told by the witnesses conflicted so that the charges were modified to disorderly conduct.

Matthew Banks, for assault, and Carrie Brown for disorderly conduct, were discharged.

TILLMAN A RICH MAN.

The Baltimore American gives us this concerning Senator Tillman who began his political career in South Carolina long about 1886, was elected Governor in 1888, and then went on till he landed in the United States Senate:

"It will doubtless surprise many people to know that among the rich men of the Senate is Mr. Tillman, of South Carolina, the Senator who is popularly pictured as standing with his ever-ready pitchfork to plunge into every man who dares oppose him and whose addresses in the Senate—vigorous, rough and at time almost coarse in their language—make some people shudder. Mr. Tillman, it will be assumed, is a plain man of the people, and in many quarters it is imagined that he has worked his way to his present exalted station from the ranks of the "poor whites"—that unhappy class in the South that is regarded with pity even by the negroes. As a matter of fact Mr. Tillman is a member of one of the very best families of South Carolina and the Tillman estate is one of the finest in the South. The family is an old one and has been prominent in the State for generations. A brother of Mr. Tillman served in Congress many years. A son of Mr. Tillman is married to a granddaughter of that famous Governor Pickens, who, as minister to Russia in the late 50's was regarded as the foremost member of the diplomatic corps at St. Petersburg, and whose daughter, Douschka, who was born there, was the pet of the Czar's family. Mr. Pickens, returning to South Carolina in 1860, was elected Governor of that State and it was he who demanded of Major Anderson the surrender of Fort Sumter.

"Mr. Tillman is by birth and education a polished gentleman. When he chose to enter politics in opposition to the Huguenot oligancy that ruled South Carolina with a rod of iron he adopted as his platform the woes of the farmer. His first address to the people of South Carolina was made in defence of his proposition that the State should make generous provisions for agricultural colleges, where the farmers could educate their boys. His success taught him the value of the support of the 'plain people" of South Carolina.

"In the Senate Mr. Tillman is reputed as an honest and sincere champion of the rights of the people, and his occasional outbursts of violent and uncouth language are deeply regretted by those who know him best. No man is more familiar with all the engaging conventionalities of social intercourse, and few men in the Senate are better versed in literature and history. Moreover as, already stated, Mr. Tillman is growing richer every day. He is one of the popular lecturers of today. Last year he averaged $3,500 a month from his lectures and this year he will be even more successful, for he has a tour that began on the night of the Monday that saw the end of Congress and will continue almost without interruption until next December."

Senator Tillman has demonstrated that he is a remarkable man, but people who know the order of things in South Carolina when the then "Captain B. R. Tillman" got it into his head to get on top, will have to smile at the statement that he broke up a "Hugguenot aligarchy that ruled South Carolina with a rod of iron." It is quite true that with his perfervid stump speeches he conjured up such a rule in the Palmetto State, but as a matter of fact when he was stirring up things in his State in 1886, John Peter Richardson was governor—a man of the loftiest character, of a high order of ability, and as mild mannered, courteous, lovable a man as was ever born. Governor Richardson was approachable by everybody and "the rod of iron" business was never in it with him or his predecessors either. This is stated in order to keep history straight.

WATER TRANSPORTATION THE REMEDY.

The Charlotte Chronicle is always hitting the mail on the head, and it does so in an effectual way by going back to the queer decision rendered by the Inter-State Commerce Commission in ruling out the just complaint of a group of cotton mills which sent up a complaint from August, Ga. Says the Chronicle:

"Some time ago the Graniteville, Sibley, Monroe and other Southern cotton mills entered suit against the Georgia Central of Georgia, Southern, Coast Line, Atlanta and West Point and other Southern and Western roads, on charge of discrimination in favor of New England cotton mills in rates on goods for shipment to the Orient, the rates exacted from the Southern mills being higher than those paid by the New England mills. The evidence was presented to the Inter-State Commerce Commission and the case argued over a month ago. The Commission has just announced its decision in which it favors the New England mills. The charge was made that the transcontinental railroads granted a lower rate to the New England mills shipping to Japan and China, thereby subjecting the Southern cotton manufacturers in Georgia, South Carolina and other States to unjust discrimination in alleged violation of the railroad rate law. Although it appeared that the Southern mill men had made out a pretty good case, the Commission finds otherwise. It is the same old story of rates being fixed by competition. The fact becomes more apparent every day that the South must look to the development of water transportation—that is the remedy."

The complaint from Augusta was that on transcontinental shipments from Southern points the rate was $1.25 per hundred pounds against 85 cents from New England, nevertheless that the New England points were several hundred miles further away from San Francisco and other pacific ports. The Commission decided that as the Southern mills were where the cotton is grown and had the advantage in securing their supply of raw material, the New England mills are entitled to the lower transcontinental rate.

On that basis of reasoning the Southern mills might reasonably ask the Inter-State Commerce Commission to make the New England mills pay a higher freight rate than Southern mills on shipments of machinery and mill supplies because the New England mills are where the machinery is made and in that respect have the advantage of the Southern mills. They also have the advantage in a greater abundance of mill help of expert character but the Commission need not take any account of a little matter like that.

We drift, however, but getting back to the Chronicle's suggestion, we fully agree that water transportation is absolutely necessary to the industrial independence of the South.

CURRENT COMMENT.

—Senator Daniel is patriotic and devoted to the Union. He is as loyal to the Government as Theodore Roosevelt or Grover Cleveland, and would be as zealous in its defense, if such an occasion should arise. But as a youth of 18 he entered the Confederate Army and rose to the rank of major in fighting for the lost cause. When peace was restored young Daniel accepted the situation manfully, and now there is no more strenuous advocate of the Union, "one an inseparable." But in the very nature of things a national candidate who formerly fought in the Confederate Army would be attacked violently, and his availability fatally. The fact that this should not be done, in fairness, is no guarantee that it would not be done with vigor and effect. If a Southern man were to head the Democratic ticket, would not a younger one, free from the issues connected with slavery and secession, be a more probable winner? There is Governor Joseph Wingate Folk, of Missouri, for instance.—Troy Press (Dem.)

—Should the Government prove its allegations, one of the most iniquitous combinations in the country will be broken up. The law of supply and demand does not operate in the anthracite coal field. The price depends on the whims of the operating railroads. Having absolute control of the output and the means of distributing it, they can charge what they please. It is observable that the roads included in the alleged combination have grown exceedingly wealthy within the last few years. Previous to any agreement, when there was competition among the producers and the transportation lines, some of these roads had a precarious existence. The cost of coal at the mines was governed by natural conditions. Competition among the carriers brought the cost of transportation to a reasonable figure, but consumers knew that they were all on an equal basis. Conditions since the creation of the monopoly indicate a more extensive industry. If the Government succeeds in proving all that is claimed against the anthracite carriers, it will force a revolution in the traffic.—Schenectady Star (Dem.).

Magnetic Mediums.

"You've got a pretty bad headache, sir, haven't you?" asked the barber, giving a dry shampoo.

"That's just what's bothering me," replied the man in the chair. "But how did you know?"

"Tell it by my wrists and hands," explained the barber. "You and I are what they'd call magnetic mediums. And the electricity in my fingers takes the pain out of your head. But I get it. That's why I know. My hands are aching now. I don't often strike a customer like you, however, or I'd have to go out of business. I'll bet my arms ache for a half hour after you're gone."—New York Post.

H. W. Bagg, merchant and furniture manufacturer of Second and Market streets, residing at 114 North Sixth St., Wilmington, N. C., says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they proved to be a grand medicine, and I can only say that Doan's Ointment is the best remedy of the kind on the face of the earth. I suffered with my back for a long time. When I sat at my desk for a while and attempted to get up I would have to catch hold of a chair for support and straighten myself up gradually. The kidney secretions were dark colored and full of sediment. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills in our papers and went to R. R. Bellamy's drug store and got a box. Since using them my back is strong and I can move about and stand up straight as ever and the kidney secretions have all cleared up. You may use my name as an endorser of the claims made for Doan's Kidney Pills and also Doan's Ointment, which I used with good results."

ANCIENT ATHENS.

Banqueting in the Grecian City in the Time of Plato.

In Professor T. G. Tucker's "Life In Ancient Athens" the author gives this as a picture of a typical banquet in that city in the time of Plato: "When all are in place the servants come round with a vessel, from which they pour water over the hands of the guests. There are brought in small tables, light and ornamental, one of which is set down before each couch for two persons, and on these are placed the several dishes as they come in order. The tables are lower than the couches, so that the right hand can reach down easily to them. Knives and forks there are none. The food is taken up with the fingers. It is true that in dealing with very soft foods or gravies or in extracting things from shells spoons were not unknown, but usually the fingers were assisted by pieces of bread hollowed out for the purpose. It is clear that there was plenty of room for neatness and daintiness in handling food, and it was no small advantage to have fingers not too sensitive.

"There were no napkins. Portions of soft bread, often especially prepared for the purpose, were used for wiping the fingers and were afterward thrown to the dogs which might be present to catch them; but, apart from the dogs, it may be something of a shock to learn that the floor, which was, of course, without a carpet, was the receptacle for shells, bones, peelings and other fragments, which were, however, swept out at a given stage of the proceedings. Conversation meanwhile must be general. The first half of dinner consists of substantials, particularly fish and birds, eels (if they could be got), comparatively little meat (such as beef, lamb and pork) and vegetables dressed to a degree of which we should hardly approve with oil, vinegar, honey and sauces.

"During this part of the meal wine is not drunk. The Athenians kept their drinking as separate as possible from their eating. Water is then brought round again, hands are washed, the tables are carried out, the floor is swept, a chant is sung to the accompaniment of the flutes, a libation of wine is poured out to the words 'to the good genius' or 'to good health,' and the second part of the banquet begins. The tables are brought in again, and what we call dessert was for this reason called by the Athenians 'the second table.' On these are placed fruits, fresh and dried; salted almonds, sweetmeats, cheese and salt."

THE HOME DOCTOR.

To cure nose bleeding, tie a string very tightly around the small part of the thumb below the knuckle.

Half a teaspoonful of table salt dissolved in a half glassful of cold water will give instant relief in case of heartburn.

People with poor digestion should drink no water with meals, but take a glassful half an hour before and drink plentifully an hour or so after each meal.

To inhale steam from a bowl of boiling water is very good for a sore throat. The sufferer should lean over the steam, drawing it in both throat and nostrils.

Many cases of indigestion, headache, neuralgia, cold hands and feet can be quickly cured by drinking slowly one or two pints of water so hot that it almost burns the throat.

Warts may be entirely removed by washing the hands two or three times a day with the water in which potatoes have been boiled or by bathing the wart several times with potato water.

Where Do the Cents Go?

Nobody knows what becomes of the millions on millions of cents that are minted annually, the production varying from 25,000,000 to 90,000,000 per annum. They simply vanish from sight and are gone forever. The phenomenon seems strange and is not easily accounted for. People say, "What becomes of all the pins?" That is easily answered. Pins soon corrode, and thus are transformed into nothing that is recognizable. A copper cent, on the other hand, is indestructible, comparatively speaking. But the solution of the problem seems to be that cents are subject to more accidents than any other coins. They change hands ten times as often as dimes, for example, and, being of small value, they are not cared for.—Los Angeles Times.

A Brotherly Act.

Admiral Lord Charles Beresford commanded a naval brigade in the Sudan when the British forces were there. One day when the Arabs were making a terrific onrush the admiral's life was saved by a mule which fell dead upon him. When the square had been reformed and the Arabs were repulsed, Lord Charles was rescued. He looked at the mule for a moment and then remarked gratefully, "Now, that poor beast did what I should call a brotherly act."

A Sight.

"Do you know, I saw something remarkable just now," observed a broker to a friend in front of the Stock Exchange in Broad street.

"What was it?"

"I saw no fewer than five leading lawyers of the financial district walk past, and every one of them had his hands in his own pockets."—New York Tribune.

A Difficulty.

Mistress—Why don't you boil the eggs? Cook—Sure, I've no clock in the kitchen to go by! Mistress—Oh, yes; you have! Cook—What good is it? t's ten minutes fast.—Philadelphia In-irer.

AS TO MRS. EDDY

Forthcoming Article From Pen of Mr. Arthur Brisbane.

Christian Scientists in Wilmington have been much interested in the publication of an interview by Mr. Arthur Brisbane, the well known New York newspaper man, with Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, the founder of the Christian Science sect.

Mr. Brisbane published an interview in the Boston American a few days ago, saying:

"I visited Mrs. Eddy as the representative of the Cosmopolitan magazine, in accordance with the arrangements that you have made. I had a long and extremely interesting talk with her. I am glad to tell you that I shall be able to write the article which you ask for, and that it will be positively reassuring and comforting to Mrs. Eddy."

Mr. Brisbane describes the condition of Mrs. Eddy's home as follows:

"Those about her are devoted to her. She is in absolute control of her own movements and mistress of her entire household. That is evident, Mrs. Eddy is thoroughly competent to take care of herself and her business. The suggestion that she should be deprived of her personal liberty, or of the property that she has earned, is preposterous and shameful. For a woman of her age, she is eighty-six years old, her mental vigor and clearness of thought are most unusual. I had every opportunity of convincing myself thoroughly as to her mental and physical condition. She talks clearly and logically. She reads beautifully, with a voice very musical and of great power. She understands business matters thoroughly. She speaks with intense feeling and gratitude of her friends and their devotion. To accuse these friends of conspiracy against her welfare is in my opinion disgraceful."

The statement of Mr. Brisbane, which purports to be that of an unbiased observer, is of peculiar interest, in view of the court proceedings now pending, to have an accounting of Mrs. Eddy's property on behalf of her "next friends."

MRS. M'KINLEY'S FRANK

Was Only Private Person Not Required to Pay Postage.

(A Washington Dispatch.)

Mrs. Ida S. McKinley, wife of the late President, was at the time of her death the only individual in the United States enjoying the privilege of sending mail through the government postoffice without charge. Others, as officials of the government, have the privilege of franking their official mail during the time of their tenure of office, but Mrs. McKinley had the unlimited privilege extended to her during her lifetime by special act of Congress.

The franking right has been extended to individuals only four times in the history of the government, and is held by no one living today. Ex-President Cleveland pays postage on his letters, as did Ex-President Washington and all the chief executives who have outlived their public service. The special disposition has been made to four widows of former Presidents. The first was that of Mrs. Sarah Polk, following the death of her husband. This dispensation was granted in 1850, and following it the usual procedure lay dormant for many years, but was revived in the case of Mrs. Grant and later in the case of Mrs. Garfield.

Mrs. Garfield was privileged to receive mail without stamps, in addition to sending it, but this was true in none of the other instances. The custom was always to place the name of the specially privileged sender of mail in the upper corner of the letter and omit the stamp. The fact of the special dispensation was of necessity generally disseminated among the carriers and clerks, that return might not be made and the regulation was widely published in the literature of the postoffice department. The act granting the privilege to Mrs. McKinley was passed on January 22, 1902.

THE DUTY OF HAPPINESS.

Keep Your Face to the Sunlight and Smile Through Your Tears.

I know an old man who has had a great deal of trouble and many losses and misfortunes, but he started out in life with a firm determination to extract just as much real enjoyment from it as he went along as possible—not in dissipation, but in wholesome recreation and fun. He has always tried to see the humorous side of things, the bright side and the duty of happiness.

The result is that, although this man has had more than his share of sorrow in his career, he has developed the inestimable faculty of making the best of every situation and of always facing the sun and turning his back to the shadows. This life habit of cheerfulness and optimism has brought out a sweetness of character and a poise and serenity of mind which are the envy of all who know him. Although he has lost his property and the most of his family and relatives, yet he radiates sunshine and helpfulness wherever he goes.

A man who can laugh outside when he is crying inside, who can smile when he feels badly, has a great accomplishment. We all love the one who believes the sun shines when he cannot see it.

A potted rose in a window will turn its face away from the darkness toward the light. Turn it as often as you will, it always turns away from the darkness and lifts its face upward toward the sun.

So we instinctively shrink from cold, melancholy, inky natures and turn our faces toward the bright, the cheerful and the sunshiny. There is more virtue in one sunbeam than in a whole atmosphere of cloud and gloom.

Your ability to carry your own sunshine with you, your own lubricant, your own light, so that, no matter how heavy the load or dark the way, you will be equal to the emergency, will measure your ability to continue and to achieve.—Success.

Both brides and grooms will spend a part of their honey moon on the house party.

On Wednesday of the past week at the home of the bride's parents, on Pinckney street, Whiteville, N. C., a quiet home wedding joined in marriage Mr. J. A. Farley, of Wilmington, and Miss Nellie High, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. P. High, of Whiteville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. E. L. Winecoff, and it is described as having been very pretty and impressive. Mr. and Mrs. Farley remained in Whiteville until Tuesday, when they left for a visit to the groom's old home in Danville. Va. Later they come to Wilmington, which will be their home in the future.

A Gretna Green marriage full of romantic incidences, was that of two of Whiteville's prominent society people in Spartanburg, South Carolina, on Wednesday. Miss Etta Powell and Mr. Elma Powell, who were of the Caine-Powell wedding party which went to Laurens, S. C., to the marriage of Miss Tallulah Caine, of Laurens, and Dr. James Williams Powell, of Whiteville, gave their friends the slip and were quietly married in Spartanburg by a Methodist divine of that place. Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Powell went direct to Jamestown and will give a house party in Norfolk tomorrow.

On the evening of July 3d, the ministering Circle of the King's Daughters will give an entertainment in the ball room of the Seashore Hotel, Wrightsville Beach, on which occasion an attractive programme will be presented, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, recitations and tableaux.

Considering the charitable purpose to which the proceeds of the entertainment are intended, it is to be hoped that a "full house" will reward the ladies for their effort.

The Ministering Circle has recently contributed the sum of $300 toward the purchase of an X-Ray apparatus for the James Walker Memorial Hospital. It is for the purpose of continuing such good works that the circle is making this effort.

The Yacht Hart-Saver has never carried a merrier party than the one given by Capt. Clarence D. Maffitt last Monday evening in compliment to Miss Lavinia Evans, of Charlotte. Aboard the yacht was a Victor and the records were favorite songs of Melba, which added much to the pleasure of the party. The night was an ideal moonlight one for a sail and the party will long be remembered by the guests, Miss Evans, Miss Mary Exum Meares, Mrs. Chas. N. Evans, Miss May McMillen, Miss Julia Post, Miss Mary Lucas Cantwell, Lieuts. Satterlee, Benham, Farwell, of the Seminole; Dr. Gray, Mr. Preston Cumming, Mr. Bert McMillen, Mr. Chas. N. Evans, Mr. Woodruff, and Mr. W. B. Drake, Jr. After the sail the boat party was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Charles N. Evans at their home on Orange street. Delightful refreshments were served and the evening was declared to be a most enjoyable one by all present.

The auxilliary yacht Hart-Saver steamed out into the river Thursday afternoon carrying a large party of the friends of Mr. Clarence D. Maffitt, whose pleasure it is to entertain. The boating party was given in compliment to Miss Mary Exum Meares, Linwood, N. C., Miss Katharine Isler, Goldsboro, Miss Mamie Bryan, Tarboro, and Miss Clark, of Scotland Neck. The run down the river was as far as the Dram Tree; thence through the tortuous stearms of Eagle Island where the scenery almost beggars description. The streams wind between banks whose growth is semi-tropical and where the long branches of overhanging trees, draped in graceful moss, makes one long to linger. The trip back to the city was by moonlight and the clear notes of celebrated vocalists ran out sweetly from the Victor which Mr. Maffitt always takes for the pleasure of his guests. Those in the party besides the guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. Jessie F. Roache, Miss Jennie Murchison, Miss Mary Calder, Miss Virginia Bailey, Miss Marguerite Walker, Mr. Graham Kenan, Mr. Milton Calder, Mr. Raymond Hunt, Mr. Burke Bridgers, and Mr. Herbert Rapelje.

Miss Amoret Lord was an attractive guest at the debut reception of Miss Maria Tucker in Henderson last week. Miss Lord, accompanied by Miss Tucker, is expected to return to Wilmington about the close of the month and both will go immediately to the "Cabbage Patch," the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Holloway, at Fifteenth and Market streets, where a house party will be given them. Of Miss Tucker's debut reception the Raleigh News and Observer says:

"The reception given by Mrs. J. H. Tucker to her beautiful and attractive young daughter, Miss Maria, was the most brilliant social function of the season. The occasion was her debut and cards had been issued to the leading society people of our city and other friends over the State. The hospitable home was a bower of rare roses, palms, ferns, etc. The electric chandeliers added radiance, and with the beautiful fairy-like costumes it seemed indeed a scene of enchantment. Mrs. Alexander Cooper presented the guests to the receiving party, consisting of Mrs. J. H. Tucker, Miss Maria Tucker, Henderson's fair young June debutante, her young cousin and visitor, Miss Amoret Lord, who has just made her debut in Wilmington. Miss Maria is the third daughter of the late Dr. J. H. Tucker, and is a descendant of the St. George Tucker family, of Virginia, and maternally she descends from the Hills, of Orton Place, Wilmington, N. C., who were prominent in both colonial and Revolutionary times."

ASHLEY HORNE, OF CLAYTON CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR

Clayton, N. C., June 8, 1907.

To the Democrats of North Carolina:

Ashley Horne, of this place, is a candidate, subject to the action of the Democratic State Convention.

I have known Mr. Horne all of his life, and feel that it is not out of place for me, of my own knowledge, to state what manner of man he is. He is a native of Johnston county; is 65 years old; had a common school education, but in early manhood volunteered as a private in the Confederate army, and following the fortune of the Army of Northern Virginia for four years, and surrendered with it at Appomattox. His record as a soldier is without blemish.

After the war he had neither the time nor ability to complete his education. Necessity required him to go to work. The first year after going home he cultivated a crop, then clerked in a store, and in 1867 began merchandising for himself. He prospered, made friends of his customers, and many of the men who began to trade with him forty years ago are still his customers and friends.

As a farmer and as a business man he has been successful, and he has also embarked in other lines of business. Now he is regarded as one of the most successful men in the State. While he has other large lines and is engaged in banking, insurance, manufacturing, merchandising, he is still a large and active farmer. He is not merely a farmer on paper, but every day during the crop season a visitor would be apt to find him in the field, actually carrying on large, active, and successful farming operations. And so well informed does he keep himself on market prices of farm products that many will recall that during several recent years he has published cotton letters which have contained wholesome advice to the farmers with regard to holding their cotton. This advice has proved to be well founded, and there is no estimating the money it saved the farmers of the State, and they were not slow in expressing their gratitude to him. In fact, he is on all business propositions a very practical and wise counsellor.

—He was one of the organizers of the Cotton Growers' Association, and he has established warehouses somewhat on the line of the bonded warehouse system now advocated by that association.

He has always been a straight, regular and organization Democrat. He has voted the Democratic tickets as they were printed.

In the early 90's, when Populism was making such headway among the people, he opposed it, but he understood the hard conditions under which the farmers were suffering; and, instead of denouncing their movement as many unwise men did, he treated them with kindness and sympathy, dissuading them from leaving the Democratic party, but never denouncing them. In the country immediately contiguous to Clayton, Populism never made any headway, and one of the reasons it made no headway was the wise and kindly manner in which the farmers were treated by Mr. Horne and other Democrats. After the fusion of Populism and Republicanism carried the State, and when many Democrats felt that it would be best for us to make some arrangement with the Populists by which the State could be redeemed, Mr. Horne was outspoken in his denunciation of the movement. Six or eight years before he had been moderate and conciliatory in dealing with the Populist, for he understood the burden under which the farmers were then staggering. But in 1898 he had no sympathy for any movement looking to a fusion with Butler, Russell and Thompson. He was outspoken in denouncing any such proposition. He came to the State Convention in 1898 and threw his whole influence in favor of a straight fight.

If there is one idea in Mr. Horne's mind, or if there is one motive in his life which predominates over all others, it is opposition and hatred of monopolies and combines. He has always stood for the individual and in favor of the freest competition. He does not believe in any law which gives one man an advantage over another, and he believes that any agreement between two or more men, or two or more companies to restrict competition, or to create a monopoly is a crime against human right and ought to be punished in the severest manner. He is a practical trust fighter. Not a trust-buster on paper, but a man who has systematically and earnestly fought monopolies in the only way he found it practicable to fight them.

When the cotton-oil industry became important he was one of the men who organized the first cotton-oil mill in Raleigh. When he ascertained that the American Cotton Oil Company had obtained control of that mill, he sold every dollar of his stock and retired. When it appeared that the fertilizer business was going into the hands of large concerns, he was one of the men who helped organize the Caraleigh Phosphate and Fertilizer Works, near the city of Raleigh. Propositions were made to buy that mill out. Mr. Horne opposed it and offered to become responsible for the future of the mill himself, provided it was kept independent. A few years ago, when it appeared that the American Cotton Oil Company and the Southern Cotton Oil Company would control the cotton seed market of the South, and they possibly might combine and regulate prices, immediately Mr. Horne assisted in the building of an independent mill at Clayton, which mill is now owned and controlled by Clayton people and run independently. It provides an independent market for seed, and furnishes independent of other companies fertilizers.

He is president of the Clayton Cotton Mills. In 1902 many North Carolina mills favored going into a combination, so as to effect it was said, large economy. The proposition was made to Mr. Horne to have tne Clayton mills included in the merger. He declined to even submit the proposition to the stockholders. The fate of that merger justified the wisdom of his course.

He was one of the first men to advocate the formation of home insurance companies, both fire and life, and to stop the outflow of North Carolina money for insurance. He was one of the early stockholders of the North Carolina Home, and is an officer and director in a number of successful life and fire companies.

One of the rules of his business life is to give the preference where practicable to do so, to local and independent companies, rather than to foreign companies or large combinations of capital. As far as it is possible to do so, he taboos trusts and monopolies. From the purchase of the oil which lubricates his machinery to the placing of insurance upon his property he always gives the preference to local dealers and independent companies.

Mr. Horne is not identified with any particular faction of the party. He is neither conservative nor radical, so called. He is a Democrat plain. If elected to office, he will not endeavor to build up any faction, nor to create any personal following looking to his future advancement. He will be content to serve the people in the office of Governor for four years, and at the end of the term return to private life. He will not attempt to use the great office of Governor as a stepping stone to any higher honors.

Mr. Horne will not make a canvass of the State prior to the Convention. If nominated, he will take the stump and ably uphold the Democratic cause. He is able to make, and will make a strong and vigorous canvass, but he will not expect busy people to come out and hear him speak when he is canvassing for himself and not as the standard bearer of his party.

Mr. Horne's personal life is without spot or blemish. No person, however much he may differ with Mr. Horne in politics or otherwise, can be found who would impugn his personal honor or believe him guilty of an improper act. He has been a sober, moral man all his life. He was a temperance man when temperance and prohibition were not popular. As far back as 1881 he voted for prohibition. He has always stood for temperance, for the home, the school, and the church.

He has always been a progressive man; and, while by far the largest tax-payer of his section, he has always voted for special taxes for schools and good roads, and has favored everything that promoted the welfare of his community, regardless of its financial effects upon him.

Mr. Horne favors the strict enforcement of the laws passed by the last General Assembly regulating railroads and requiring them to give better service at reduced rates. He believes in holding corporations to their duty and within the law, and doing this with a strong, bold hand. He has always favored strict regulation of corporationsffi has always favored requiring railroads to perform their duties vigoously, and at the lowest possible rates, and he never rode a mile on a railroad pass, believing that railroads should serve and not boss. More than 30 years ago, when the rates on cotton between Clayton and Raleigh were too high, he organized a wagon train and sent the cotton through the country, until the railroads, in disgust, asked him to name what he thought was a fair rate. This he did, and this rate between Clayton and Raleigh has never been exceeded. He has always opposed the granting of special favors to railroads. In 1885 he was a member of the State Senate. The Richmond and Danville Railroad proposed to build to Murphy, if the State would donate free the use of several hundred convicts. Mr. Horne was anxious as any to see that work completed, but he thought the Richmond and Danville was under obligations to build it at its own expense. He voted against the donation of the convicts, and was one of the Senators who signed a protest against the measure.

This is a brief account of Mr. Horne's life. He is in the race today. He is encouraged by promises of support from every section of the State. We believe he will be nominated.

In conclusion, I beg to say if you want to support a Confederate soldier for Governor, Mr. Horne is the man. If you want a successful business man and a life-long farmer, for the office, Mr. Horne is the man. If you want a man who has been a consistent and life-long enemy of trust and combination, Mr. Horne is the man. If you want a man who has been a leader in the industrial development of his section, Mr. Horne is the man. If you want a man who has always stood for good roads, for temperance, education, and morality, Mr. Horne is the man. If you want a man for Governor who will give his whole time to that office and who will not aspire to other positions, Mr. Horne is the man. If you want to support a straight, fire-tried Democrat, who has never turned either to the right or to the left, but who has consistently fought the party's battles for more than forty years, Mr. Horne is such a man. If you want a man for Governor who will fill the office well, who has never done and will never do an unworthy or improper act, who will never do anything that will require defense, apology, or explanation, Ashley Horne is such a man.

STORE WINDOW LIGHTS.

Regulations For Their Control as Applied In Berlin.

The regulation of artificial lighting in connection with window displays is a subject which has been given com paratively little attention by the municipalities of this country, considering the extent to which it is used for this purpose in these days. That this phase of the lighting question demands closer scrutiny there can be no doubt, and it might be well for information on the matter to look to those cities which have given it study. Stringent regulations have been adopted in Berlin and other European cities, where merchants were inclined to take advantage of laxity in the premises. In Berlin lamps outside shop windows must not be lower than ten feet above the pavement or project more than forty inches from the wall. Where the lighting in the windows is done by oil, petroleum, gas flame or Welsbachs there must always be a sheet of glass not less than one-tenth of an inch thick under the lamps and running the whole length and breadth of the shop windows, so as to completely cover the articles in the window, and nothing is to be put above the lamps. The lamps must be at least forty inches below any inflammable part of the construction and ten inches from any such part horizontally.

There are also regulations as to iron screens where there is bare wood and as to efficient ventilation. Bare flames are not allowed in igniting the gas. This must be done by chemical or electrical kindlers or by electric distance spark kindling arrangements especially sanctioned by the authorities. The regulations for incandescent electric lamps are about equally strict.—Municipal Journal and Engineer.

Stripped at the Law.

Dickens describes in his novel "Bleak House" the woes of those who were involved in suits in the chancery court and the delays to which they were subjected before the English judicial procedure was reformed. Tradition says that an artist once represented the same idea in much less space. Two suitors in chancery, being reconciled to each other after a very tedious and expensive suit, applied to him to paint a device in commemoration of their return to peace and amity. He gave them entire satisfaction by painting them in the act of shaking hands—one clad in his shirt, the other without even that.

Wants More Than Beauty.

The modern Englishman has more cool common sense than his great-grandfather. A beautiful woman attracts his eye, and he may have a passing fascination, but that feeling is only a transient one unless Miss Beauty has other recommendations. If he cannot get beauty combined with usefulness, he goes in for plainness.—London Women's Life.

ODD CUSTOMS.

Every house must be decked with flowers on New Year's day in Japan.

In Buenos Ayres the police alone have the right of whistling on the streets. Any other person whistling is at once arrested.

In Ashanti many families are forbidden the use of certain meats. In like manner others are forbidden to wear clothes of a certain color.

If a carriage upsets or injures another carriage in the streets of St. Petersburg or if a person is knocked down, the horses of the offending vehicle are seized and confiscated to the use of the fire brigade.

It is the practice of the Ashantees and Fantees to bury one-third of the property of a dead man, converted into gold dust, under his head, and rifling the grave of an enemy is considered the proper action for a warrior.

Clapping the hands in various ways is the polite method in central Africa of saying "Allow me," "I beg pardon," "Permit me to pass" and "Thanks." It is resorted to in respectful introduction and leave taking.

Close Application.

"Now that you 're about to go to college, my son, let me enjoin upon you to bear in mind one thing."

"What is that, dad?"

"It is this, my boy—the greatest results are always achieved by close application."

—Special to Charlotte Observer from Salisbury, June 21: Rowan county Republicans have indicated that in a few days they will invite Ex-Senator Marion Butler to speak to them here soon. The nature of the address has not been announced, but the mission will probably be political. The Democratic politicians are desirous of hearing him, too, and there is probably no event political that would draw as Mr. Butler would do. There is a suggestion from the Evening Post here that Ex-Senator Butler will be expected to rap Judge Adams slyly in the ribs, but it is not known whether that part of the programme will be carried out or not. Mr. Butler has never entirely lost his popularity here, and in the controversy with Judge Adams the politically inclined say he has 75 per cent, of the party with him.

THE GREAT "WAR COMET."

Its Fiery, Spreading Tail Was Fifty Million Miles Long.

The wonderful "war comet" of 1861 sprang so suddenly into view and blazed with such unexampled brilliancy as to astonish the astronomers and frighten those unlearned in cometary lore half out of their wits. The unlearned declared that the civil war, which was just getting well under headway, must have something to do with it. However this may be, it burst forth, unheralded and uninvited, shining with greater brilliancy and magnitude than any phenomena of a similar nature which that generation had ever seen.

On the night of July 3 of that year it exhibited a most wonderful spectacle. In the evening the nucleus did not appear to be larger than a star in the first or second magnitude. As the small hours of the morning approached, however, the nucleus visibly increased in both magnitude and brilliancy. The tail waved back and forth over our little world in a most threatening manner, at times sending rays almost to the zenith. On the morning of July 5 the astronomers announced through the daily papers that the head of the great comet was only separated from the earth by a distance of 12,000,000 miles. According to the report sent out from the Cambridge observatory, the comet appears to have passed its ascending node between the 27th and the 29th of June in longitude 279 degrees, the longitude of the earth being 277 degrees at the same time.

On Oct. 10 its tail extended over a space of 50,000,000 miles and at several points was not less than 10,000,000 miles in width.

At first it was generally conceded that it was the famous comet of 1556, the one which caused the Emperor Charles V. of France to resign his imperial throne, he taking it to be a warning from God. All surmises were subsequently set at rest by the discovery that it was the famous Thatcher comet, discovered by Professor A. F. Thatcher at the Rutherford observatory in New York city.

A STRANGE MAKEUP.

When Wilton Lackaye Looked "Like a Sore Finger."

Barrett was a very pompous man, and as my bump of reverence has always been a concavity he early marked me out for his displeasure. After giving me a list of plays for which to procure wardrobes—plays which he did not do during the season—he suddenly changed his mind and put on "Julius Caesar" in Richmond, Va. It was impossible to get an armor there. I played Metellus Cimber, first citizen and Phasarius—and a soldier! Luckily I had sandals and fleshings. I borrowed a tunic from Otis Skinner, a toga from the stage manager, who was out of the bill; I had a mob shirt made in the theater; I got out a makeup for Phasarius, the barbarian, but the soldier? All of the utility men were compelled to "eke the battle rabble out" as soldiers in the last act. I could not get in the town a helmet and armor, so I simply "lurked" behind the other soldiers clad in fleshings, sandals and Skinner's tunic, which came halfway to my knees. I was then five feet eleven and three-fourths and weighed 130 pounds, so you may imagine the audience hardly became conscious of me until my third entrance.

My modest disposition and my desire not to meet the star's eye did not avail me. He spotted me the first thing. As the curtain came down he called me and thundered, "What do you think you represent?"

I shyly responded, "A camp follower, sir, lurking behind the main column and robbing the dead."

"Huh!" he grunted, his eye passing up my stretch of shanks in pink fleshings, surmounted by the tight little tunic at top. "You look like a sore finger!"—Wilton Lackaye in Bohemian Magazine.

A Dame School In England, 1837.

On a perch forming a triangle with the corner of the room sat a cock and two hens. Under a stump bed immediately beneath was a dog kennel in the occupation of three black terriers, whose barking, added to the noise of the children and the cackling of the fowls on the approach of a stranger, was almost deafening. There was only one small window, at which sat the teacher, obstructing three-fourths of the light it was capable of admitting.—Parliamentary Report.

The Number Three.

Three, which since the days of Pythagoras has been the divine number, is not invariably fortunate, for, though the fates are three, so also are the furies. The graces are three, but so also are the judges in hades and the heads of Cerberus. Then there are the records of three disloyal tribes in Welsh history; there are the three robbers in Orion's belt; there were the three tyrants at Athens, and 3 in mythology is as unlucky as it is divine.

AMBUSHED AND MURDERED

Prominent South Carolinian Shot by Unknown Parties.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

Augusta, Ga., June 22.—A Chronicle a special from Batesburg, S. C., says George W. Mabus, a prominent merchant was shot to death on the Aiken county line today by parties lying in ambush. Mabus was returning in a buggy from his mill to his home and was unaccompanied. Two loads of buckshot took effect in his head and a third load in his neck. The shots were heard by Dr. Mitchell, who was attending a patient near the scene, and he found Mabus in a dying condition.

A few days ago Mabus was concerned in a cutting scrape with Lester Fallaw. Blood hounds from Columbus are on the trail of the murderers, but hope of the hounds being able to follow the trail was practically abandoned on account of the extremely dry weather and the presence of so many people about the scene before the arrival of the dogs.

EMMY'S REDEMPTION

By Martha McCulloch-Williams.

Copyright, 1906, by Homer Sprague.

"You wish! 'If wishes were horses, beggars might ride.'" Aunt Mag quoted spitefully to her partial namesake, Margaret Emmeline.

The Emmeline had been a standing grievance ever since the girl was christened. Aunt Mag, otherwise Miss Bronson, had an instinct of jealous supremacy toward whatever was her own. Being a just person, she called her only niece by the awkward full name, notwithstanding in all other mouths she was simply Emmy. That was the worst of it. Miss Bronson in her own mind accused Emmy's meek mother of having plotted it from the first. Naturally she had not shed many tears when the offender slipped apologetically out of life, leaving Emmy to the untender mercies of her masterful sister-in-law. Handsome, luckless, Jack Bronson, the father, had died soon after Emmy was born—died on the ocean and been buried at sea—at least that was what his sister had given out. The widow had said nothing. Neither had she worn black—to the anger of Miss Bronson and the great scandal of the village. For once the slim faced woman, who was commonly as wax in stronger hands, had withstood her world, saying only with a dreamy, wistful look, "Jack understands."

Emmy was her father over again—dark eyed, olive skinned, with red lips delicately curved and cheeks like damask roses. She had his gay temper also, his high head, his habit of getting her own way in spite of everything. The village unanimously pronounced her a handful—even for Miss Bronson, whose hand was not light. Emmy was fourteen when her mother died. It was a standing marvel to everybody that she had gone quietly away to boarding school at Miss Bronson's orders, albeit heretofore she had hated and flouted schools of every sort. It was even a greater surprise to have her come back four years later, just the same Emmy for all her wonderful accomplishments.

It was plain she did not love Aunt Mag, but the two kept truce with each other. Those who wondered at it might have understood had they heard poor Lena Bronson's dying admonition: "Obey your Aunt Margaret. Remember what we owe her. Until—unless the debt is paid—it rests with you to make her the only possible return." There had been no need to be more explicit—Emmy understood. Through a passion of tears she had sobbed in answer, "I will."

Obedience had been hard and wearing often, but she had not flinched until it came to the question of marriage. Miss Bronson's precepts were all against her example. "I want you to marry young—and marry well," she had said to Emmy as soon as the girl came home. For a year she had said nothing more save in a general way, but Emmy had come to understand what her elder meant by marrying well. Cliffe Gorton was the only one among her half dozen beaus Miss Bronson approved. She had to approve him indeed, seeing that she had at least half raised him. Judge Gorton, his father, had been her man of business ever since her own father died. His wife, flabby and an invalid, had been pretty well under Miss Bronson's thumb—so had her son, who was, after a sort, her image made vigorous and vital. From his cradle Cliffe had been a prize pretty boy—as fair and blue eyed as Emmy was peach tinted. Although he was three years older, she had thrashed him roundly in the era of short frocks. Possibly it was some reflex memory of the thrashing which made him as a lover appear to her ridiculously impossible.

"If my wishes were horses I'd surely ride away from Granby—and everything," she said, sighing faintly as she glanced at Miss Bronson.

Miss Bronson frowned heavily. "I dare say you'd take the road to Owenton," she said pointedly. "Let's have this thing out, Margaret Emmeline. I see no use in beating about the bush. You were well enough content here until Cliffe Gorton proposed to you and that scatter brained young Hyland came to town. Even you must admit that there is no comparison possible between the two men. Cliffe has everything in his favor; Hyland nothing. In spite of that, since you seem to fancy him"—

"Oh, but I don't! You are wrong—all wrong." Emmy interrupted, with, however, a furious blush.

Miss Bronson went on as though she had not spoken: "I should let you have your way but for one thing. Whoever marries you must be told the truth. Cliffe knows it already—besides he understands. I have done and borne much out of love for my father's name. Your father disgraced it"—

"You must not say so. Nobody was ever quite sure," Emmy panted, her cheeks very white. Miss Bronson glanced at her dry eyed, then looked away. Her own lips were ashen, but they laughed bitterly as she said: "You mean everybody was sure—except your poor, foolish mother. She believed her husband—against right and reason—against the whole world. Do you know exactly what happened? I thought not," as Emmy shook her head.

"It was this: My brother, in desperate straits for money, went into Judge Cliffe's office to beg him for a loan. It was late afternoon. He knew the judge had just been paid several thousand dollars which he could not bank. The money, indeed, was in a letter tray on his desk, ready to go into the safe. There was a great hurly burly in the office—people coming and going, clerks getting ready to shut up everything. The judge was in and out of the main office a dozen times while your father sat beside the desk and the tray of money. Two men, clerks there, saw him pick it up and finger the bills in it. Two others heard him entreating the judge a little later to lend him even a thousand dollars. The judge refused"—

"Of course. He would refuse money to the dying," Emmy broke in, her eyes flashing.

Miss Bronson frowned. "He is a just man and kind, else where would we be?" she said. "But to go on. My brother kept the judge so late everybody else had gone, and the safe was still to be shut. The money tray and several other trays were upon the desk. Your father helped the judge hustle them inside it, then rushed away from him and took a train for the city. Next day when the judge opened the safe the tray and the money were missing. He was sure he had put in whatever John gave him. He had knelt in front of the safe, setting things on the floor, and then fitting them in place. The lock had not been touched, and the money had been there with just the two of them. The judge didn't have it. The inevitable conclusion was"—

"I won't believe it. I can't. It was wicked in you to believe— Oh, I know what you did—replaced the money and kept everything quiet—on condition that my father should—disappear. He accepted your condition. I would not. I should have fought. It is because of him I hate the race of Gorton. I will never marry Cliffe—not though you turn me in the street."

"You know I shall not do that," Miss Bronson said heavily. "Understand, though, you shall marry nobody else. I gave up my comfort to save my pride. You shall let no stranger know—our secret—perhaps to spurn you when he did know."

"My father was innocent. But until it is proved I shall abide by your will," Emmy said, her color coming back. "Because it is his wish—and my mother's," she added as she walked to the window. Almost instantly she turned from it, saying huskily: "Judge Gorton is coming—running, almost—and without his hat. What can it mean?"

"More trouble," Miss Bronson said, her mouth setting hard. Next minute the judge burst into the room with a face of ashes. He had something in his hand—something flat and square and dusty.

"Look, Margaret!" he cried, holding it out to Miss Bronson. "Here is the money—every dollar. We found it under the safe when it was moved today. There is just a little space—hardly an inch. I must have crowded the tray into it in my fidgeting with the other things. God forgive me that I did not think of the possibility then. But, remember, I never accused that poor boy"—

"But you let him suffer—judgment and punishment," Emmy cried, springing forward. "Now will you atone by helping me find him?"

"Gladly," said the judge. "It was the first thing I thought of. We will find him if he is living."

"You will not need to search far," Miss Bronson said, with quivering lips. "I have never lost track of him or let him suffer for anything—at least not since poor Lena died."

Next fall there was a wedding at the Bronson place—very quiet, but very happy. The groom's name was Hyland, and the bride was given away by her father, who had very white hair and perpetually brooding eyes. Miss Bronson cried a little to see Emmy go away, but after all was over she laid her hand softly upon her brother's shoulder, saying:

"After all, Jack, we have each other left."

Civilization In France A. D. 1617.

Marshal d'Ancre was assassinated in the streets of Vitry on April 24, 1617. The people of France have always been looked upon as fairly well civilized at that time. Yet this is what these civilized Frenchmen did. They dug up the corpse of D'Ancre, dragged it through the streets to the Pont Neuf, where they hung it up by the feet. Then it was dragged through the streets again to the Place de Greve. D'Ancre, or what was left of him, was dismembered and chopped to pieces, the crowds fighting for morsels of the "excommunicated Jew," as they called him. His entrails were thrown into the river, his ears were sold to the best burgher and what was left was burned in front of the statue of Henri IV. Most horrible of all, his heart was torn out, cooked and eaten by these human wolves. The next day the dead marshal's ashes were offered for sale on the streets, while his wife was accused of sorcery, dragged to the Bastille and her head hacked off.

Holmes on Domestic Economy.

The laughable and the pathetic are sometimes strangely mingled in little exhibitions of domestic economy—a plate of apples, for instance, with the defective parts cut out for the children; a small basket of homemade gingerbread, with one or two pieces of pound cake carefully disposed on the surface so as to appear to the best advantage.—"Autocrat of the Breakfast Table."

DOCTOR KILLED HIS WIFE.

New York Man Sent to Penitentiary for 15 Years.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

New York, June 22.—The jury that tried Dr. Samuel S. Guy, charged with murdering his wife, late tonight returned a verdict of guilty of manslaughter in the first degree. Dr. Guy was at once sentenced to fifteen years imprisonment. Before sentence was passed on him Dr. Guy addressed the court, denying that he had killed his wife. The judge pronouncing sentnce said he believed the evidence justified a verdict of guilty. The trial was held at Flushing, L. I.

A servant in the Guy household testified that Dr. Guy returned to his home on the night of the shooting and began to annoy her in the dining room. Mrs. Guy came into the room and insisted that he stop. Together the doctor and his wife went into a front room from which came sounds of a violent quarrel. A few minutes later the servant heard a pistol shot and Mrs. Guy staggered into the dining room and fell dead on the floor. Dr. Guy was arrested a few minutes later as he was leaving the house.

SECRETARY TAFT RETURNS.

Enjoyed His Western Trip, But Had Hard Time.

Washington, June 22.—Bronzed and pretty well tired out, yet in good health except for hoarseness, Secretary of War Taft returned to Washington from his Western trip today. Mr. Taft, in recounting his Western trip, said that altogether it had been a pleasant, though rather a hard one, as he spent nine out of the fourteen nights he was absent on railroad trains. He said he had entirely recovered from the attack of indigestion he had suffered at St. Paul.

Antiquity of Proverbs.

Proverbs existed long before books. In the earliest times they served as the unwritten language of morality and have been passed down through the generations. In Africa there are numerous quaint proverbs. Among them are: "He who dives on dry land will scarify his face," "Two people cannot sit down upon the point of the same thorn at the same time." In the Transvaal the proverb, "Beware of a silent man; he has a brass band in his mouth," is often heard.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE

—Danbury Reporter: The threshing machine men will do a good business this summer, as the grain crop is the best for years. Harvest has already begun.

—Fayetteville, June 21: Mr. James Robinson, a prominent citizen of Bladen county, suffering with appendicitis, who wa brought here for treatment in the Highsmith Hospital, is getting on very well after an operation.

—Fayetteville, June 21: Last night Sheriff Watson and officers captured an 80-gallon copper still in full blast on Sandy Run, six miles from Fayetteville; also a quantity of beer and syrup and meal and one of the moonshiners, a man named Tyson, of Rockfish township.

—Greensboro Record: We quarrel a lot with the Lord, but he brings things out all right. People imagined from the quality of the weather for the past two months or more that the wheat and corn crop would be short, but farmers who know say that wheat is the best in years, while the prospect for corn so far is excellent.

—Fayetteville, June 21: Tuesday afternoon there was a reorganization of the working force of the National Bank of Fayetteville, with Mr. S. W. Cooper, of Oxford, as active vice president, and the following other officers: A. B. McMillan, cashier, a deserved promotion for this fine young business man; T. M. Shaw, assistant cashier; Albert Stewart, teller.

—Rockingham, June 21: Rockingham has received its first automobile, "the A. B. C." This automobile, it is claimed, will ford streams, climb hills and go through sand and mud. Mr. A. B. Cole, a North Carolinian, is president of the company that made it, and a good deal of the stock is owned by North Carolina parties. The machine is made in St. Louis.

—Halifax, June 21: Hail and wind storms have destroyed the crops, and blown down a number of barns and outhouses throughout Halifax county, and the continued wet weather has prevented the replanting of quite a number of these crops. It is too late to plant in cotton, so most of the injured farmers will replant in peanuts and corn. All cotton in this section is very backward in growth.

—Raleigh News and Observer: It is stated that the city of Raleigh is to have a police telegraph system, patrol wagons, etc., and that the system will be installed about the first of September. It is understood that arrangements have practically been made by the police committee of the Board of Aldermen, and the Gamewell Fire Alarm Company.

—Lexington, N. C., June 21: Suit has been instituted against the W. E. Holt cotton mill by Maggie Earnhardt and W. P. Gallimore, who suffered by an accident to the elevator some days ago. The woman's limbs were broken and she will probably be a cripple for life. She asks for $20,000 and Gallimoore $1,000. Suit has also been started against the Oneida Chair Company by J. M. Fritts, administrator of J. R. Everhardt, who was killed in an explosion of gasoline some months ago, the burning stuff being thrown all over him.

—Charlotte Observer, June 21: The George A. Howell coarse yarn mill, at No. 206 East Fifth street, was burned to the ground last night. The loss was estimated at from $20,000 to $25,000 which was fully covered by insurance. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin, matches having been discovered in the cotton Thursday by Mr. Howell. So certain was he of the fact that someone was trying to burn his plant, that he yesterday took out additional insurance on his machinery and cotton on hand. While the plant was well covered by insurance, Mr. Howell's loss in time and loss of profits will be heavy.

—Selma, N. C., June 21: The people all over the State are penalizing the railroads for failure to deliver freight within a reasonable time. There were sixteen of these cases tried here one day this week. In fact it was an all day performance. The Southern Railway Company, the A. C. L. Railroad Co., and the S. A. L. Railroad Co. were all involved in some of the cases and in each case except one judgment was entered against the carriers. The Coast Line was representer by ex-Governor Aycock, the Southern by E. S. Abell and the Seaboard by Day, Bell & Allen, of Raleigh. L. H. Allred represented all the plaintiffs.

A Fortunate Texan.

Mr. E. W. Goodloe, of 107 St. Louis St., Dallas, Tex., says: "In the past year I have become acquainted with Dr. King's New Life Pills, and no laxative I ever before tried so effectually disposes of malaria and biliousness." They don't grind nor gripe. 25c at R. R. Bellamy's drug store.

THE REAL TEST

Of Herpicide Is In Giving It a Thorough Trial.

There is only one test by which to judge of the efficiency of any article and that is by its ability to do that which it is intended to do. Many hair vigors may look nice and smell nice, but the point is—do they eradicate Dandruff and stop falling hair?

No, they do not, but Herpicide does, because it goes to the root of the evil and kills the germ that attacks the papilla from whence the hair gets its life.

Letters from prominent people everywhere are daily proving that Newbro's Herpicide stands the "test of use."

It is a delightful dressing, clear, pure and free from oil or grease.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

The Greensboro Keeley Institute!

The Only one in North Carolina

Note of Warning

To The Public:

The Keeley Cure has now been in successful operation for 28 consecutive years and the merits and reputation of the Dr. Leslie E. Keeley Remedies have been throughly established. Because of this fact, many imitators are seeking to turn this knowledge to their own advantage by falsely claiming that they are able to sell and administer our remedies and treatment. It should be borne in mind that the Keeley Remedies are only to be obtained at establishments known by the uniform name of The Keeley Institute. There is one or more of these establishments in nearly every State in the Union, besides several in foreign countries. THERE IS ONLY ONE KEELEY INSTITUTE IN THE STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, AND THAT IS LOCATED AT GREENSBORO. At all Keeley Institutes the remedies used are procured from our laboratory, and in all cases they are administered by physicians who have been especially instructed by us. It follows, therefore, that all other establishments claiming to be able to sell our remedies and administer our treatment are obtaining money under false pretenses and will be dealt with accordingly. The public is warned that under no circumstances can Keeley remedies or treatment be obtained except at authorized Keeley Institutes. These imitators sometimes adopt similar names to those by which our remedies are known, but if patients will take pains to see that they are in an authorized Keeley Institute they need not fear imposition. The Keeley remedies will cure inebriety, all kinds of drug using, the tobacco habit and neurasthenia; they are never administered in hospitals and no patients are treated at Keeley Institutes for other than the above named diseases.

THE LESLIE E. KEELEY CO.,
Dwight, Illinois.

THE KEELEY INSTITUTE, at Greensboro, N. C., is the only one in this State, and all representations that there is in this State any cure that is identical with or the same as the Keeley Double Chloride of Gold Cure, are malicious, false and made for the purpose of deceiving. We learn with indignant regret that such claim is being made, and feeling that if it be hurtful to us it will prove even more disastrous to those who are deceived thereby, we sound this note of warning.

CHAPTER VI.

THREE days later the north Atlantic squadron of the British navy sailed down the coast from Halifax, did not even pause at Bar Harbor, but sent a wireless telegram to the Consternation, which pulled up anchor and joined the fleet outside, and so the warships departed for another port.

Katherine stood by the broad window in the sewing room in her favorite attitude, her head sideways against the pane, her eyes languidly gazing upon the bay, fingers drumming this time a very slow march on the window sill. Dorothy sat in a rocking chair reading a letter for the second time. There had been silence in the room for some minutes, accentuated rather than broken by the quiet drumming of the girl's fingers on the window sill. Finally Katherine breathed a deep sigh and murmured to herself:

"Far called our navy fades away;
On dune and headland sinks the fire.
Lo, all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre!

I wonder if I've got the lines right," she whispered to herself. She had forgotten there was any one else in the room and was quite startled when Dorothy spoke.

"Kate, that's a solemn change, from Gilbert to Kipling. I always judge your mood by your quotations. Has life suddenly become too serious for 'Pinafore' or the 'Mikado?'"

"Oh, I don't know," said Katherine, without turning round. "They are humorous all, and so each furnishes something suitable for the saddened mind. Wisdom comes through understanding your alphabet properly. For instance, first there was Gilbert, and that gave us G; then came Kipling, and he gave us K; thus we get an algebraic formula, G. K., which are the initials of Chesterton, a still later arrival, and as the mind increases in despondency it sinks lower and lower down the alphabet until it comes to S, and thus we have Barn-yard Shaw, an improvement on the Kail-yard school, who takes the O pshaw view of life. And relaxing hold of him I sink deeper until I come to W—W. W. Jacobs. How I wish he wrote poetry! He should be the humorist of all sailors, and perhaps some time he will desert barges for battleships. Then I shall read him with increased enjoyment."

"I wouldn't give Mark Twain for the lot," commented Dorothy, with decision.

"Mark Twain isn't yours to give, my dear. He belongs to me also. You've forgotten that comparisons are odious. Our metier is not to compare, but to take what pleases us from each.

"How doth the little busy bee
Improve each shining hour
And gather honey all the day
From every opening flower.

Watts. You see, I'm still down among the W's. Oh, Dorothy, how can you sit there so placidly when the Consternation has just faded from sight? Selfish creature!

"Oh, give me tears for others' woes
And patience for mine own!

I don't know who wrote that, but you have no tears for others' woes, merely greeting them with ribald laughter," for Dorothy, with the well read letter in her hand, was making the rafters ring with her merriment, something that had never before happened during her long tenancy of that room. Kate turned her head slowly round, and the expression on her face was half indignant, half humorous, while her eyes were uncertain weather prophets and gave equal indication of sunshine or rain.

"Why, Katherine, you look like a tragedy queen, rather than the spirit of comedy! Is it really a case of 'Tit-willow, tit-willow, tit-willow?' You see, I'm a-rescuing you from the bottom of the alphabet and bringing you up to the Gilbert plane, where I am more accustomed to you, and understand you better. Is this despondency due to the departure of the Consternation and the fact that she carries away with her Jack Lamont, blacksmith?"

The long sigh terminated in a woeful "Yes."

"The ship that has gone out with him we call she. If he had eloped with a real she, then wearing the willow or singing it, however futile, might be understandable. As it is I see nothing in the situation to call for a sigh."

"That is because you are a hardened sinner, Dorothy. You have no heart, or at least if you have it is untouched and therefore you cannot understand. If that note in your hand were a love missive instead of a letter from your lawyers, you would be more human, Dorothy."

The hand which held the paper crumpled it up slightly as Katherine spoke.

"Business letters are quite necessary and belong to the world we live in," said Dorothy, a glow of brighter color suffusing her cheeks. "Surely your acquaintance with Mr. Lamont is of the shortest."

"He has called upon me every day since the night of the ball," maintained Katherine stoutly.

"Well, that's only three times."

"Only three! How you talk! One would think you had never been schooled in mathematics. Why, three is a magic figure. You can do plenty of amazing things with it. Don't you know that three is a numeral of love?"

"I thought two was the number," chimed Dorothy, with heartless mirth.

"Three," said Katherine taking one last look at the empty horizon, then seating herself in front of her friend—"three is a recurring decimal. It goes on and on and on forever, and if you write it for a thousand years you are still as far from the end as when you began. It will carry you round the world and back again and never diminish. It is the mathematical emblem of the nature of true love."

"Is it so serious as all that, Kate, or are you just fooling again?" asked Dorothy, more soberly than heretofore. "Has he spoken to you?"

"Spoken? He has done nothing but speak, and I have listened—oh, so intently and with such deep understanding. He has never before met such a woman as I and has frankly told me so."

"I am very glad he appreciates you, dear."

"Yes, you see, Dorothy, I am really much deeper than the ordinary woman. Who, for instance, could find such a beautiful love simile from a book of arithmetic costing 25 cents as I have unearthed from decimal fractions? With that example in mind, how can you doubt that other volumes of college learning reveal to me their inner meaning? John presented to me as he said goodby a beautifully bound copy of that celebrated text book, 'Saunders' Analytical Chemistry,' with particularly tender passages marked in pencil by his own dear hand."

Rather bewildered, for Kate's expression was one of pathos, unrelieved by any gleam of humor, Dorothy nevertheless laughed, although the laugh brought no echo from Katherine.

"And did you give him a volume of Browning in return?"

"No, I didn't. How can you be so unsympathetic? Is it impossible for you to comprehend the unseen link that binds John and me? I rummaged the book store until I found a charming little edition of 'Marshall's Geologist's Pocket Companion' covered with beautiful brown limp Russia leather—I thought the Russia binding was so inspirational—with a sweet little clasp that keeps it closed—typical of our hands at parting. On the flyleaf I wrote, 'To J. L., in remembrance of many interesting conversations with his friend, K. K.' It only needed another K to be emblematic and political, a reminiscence of the olden times, when you people of the south, Dorothy, were making it hot for us deserving folks in the north. I hadn't time to go through the book very thoroughly, but I found many references to limestone, which I marked, and one particularly choice bit of English relating to the dissolution and reconsolidation of various minerals I drew a parallelogram around in red ink. A friend of mine in a motor launch was good enough to take the little parcel direct to the Consternation, and I have no doubt that at this moment Jack is perusing it and perhaps thinking of the giver. I hope it's up to date and that he had not previously bought a copy."

"You don't mean to say, Kate, that your conversation was entirely about geology?"

"Certainly not. How could you have become imbued with an idea so absurd? We had many delightful dalliances down the romantic groves of chemistry, heart to heart talks on metallurgy, and once—ah, shall I ever forget it?—while the dusk gently infolded us and I gazed into those bright, speaking, intelligent eyes of his as he bent nearer and nearer, while his low, sonorous voice in well chosen words pictured to me the promise which fortified cement holds out to the world—that is, ignorant person, portland cement strengthened by ribs of steel—and I sat listening breathless as his glowing phrases prophesied the future of this combination."

Katherine closed her eyes, rocked gently back and forth and crooned, almost inaudibly:

"When you gang awa, Jimmie,
Faur across the sea, laddie,
When ye gang to Russian lands,
What will ye send to me, laddie?

I know what I shall get. It will probably be a newly discovered recipe for the compounding of cement which will do away with the necessity of steel strengthening."

"Kate, dear, you are overdoing it. It is quite right that woman should be a mystery to man, but she should not aspire to become a mystery to her sister woman. Are you just making fun or is there something in all this more serious than your words imply?"

"Like the steel strengthening in the cement, it may be there, but you can't see it, and you can't touch it, but it makes—oh, such a difference to the slab! Heigho, Dorothy, let us forsake these hard headed subjects and turn to something human! What have your lawyers been bothering you about? No trouble over the money, is there?"

Dorothy shook her head.

"No. Of course there are various matters they have to consult me about and get my consent to this project or the other."

"Read the letter. Perhaps my mathematical mind can be of assistance to you."

Dorothy had concealed the letter and did not now produce it.

"It is with reference to your assistance, and your continued assistance, that I wish to speak to you. Let us follow the example of the cement and the steel and form a compact. In one respect I am going to imitate the Consternation. I leave Bar Harbor next week."

Katherine sat up in her chair, and her eyes opened wide.

"What's the matter with Bar Harbor?" she asked.

"You can answer that question better than I, Kate. The Kempt family are not visitors, but live here all the year round. What do you think is the matter with Bar Harbor?"

"I confess it's a little dull in the winter time, and in all seasons it is situated a considerable distance from New York. Where do you intend to go, Dorothy?"

"That will depend largely on where my friend Kate advises me to go, because I shall take her with me if she will come."

"Companion, lady's maid, parlor maid, maid of all work, cook, governess, typewriter girl—which have I to be? Shall I get one afternoon a week off, and may my young man come and see me, if I happen to secure one, and, extremely important, what are the wages?"

"You shall fix your own salary, Kate, and my lawyer men will arrange that the chosen sum is settled upon you so that if we fall out we can quarrel on equal terms."

"Oh, I see, it's an adopted daughter I am to be, then."

"An adopted sister rather."

"Do you think I am going to take advantage of my friendship with an heiress and so pension myself off?"

"It is I who am taking the advantage," said Dorothy, "and I beg you to take compassion rather than advantage upon a lone creature who has no kith or kin in the world."

"Do you really mean it, Dot?"

"Of course I do. Should I propose it if I didn't?"

"Well, this is the first proposal I've ever had, and I believe it is customary to say on those occasions that it is so sudden or so unexpected, and time is required for consideration."

"How soon can you make up your mind, Kate?"

"Oh, my mind's already made up. I'm going to jump at your offer, but I think it more ladylike to pretend a mild reluctance. What are you going to do, Dorothy?"

"I don't know. I've settled on only one thing—I intend to build a little stone and tile church, very quaint and old fashioned, if I get the right kind of architect to draw a plan for it, and this church is to be situated in Haverstock."

"Where's Haverstock?"

"It is a village near the Hudson river, on the plain that stretches toward the Catskills."

"It was there you lived with your father, was it not?"

"Yes, and my church is to be called the Dr. Amhurst Memorial church."

"And do you propose to live at Haverstock?"

"I was thinking of that."

"Wouldn't it be just a little dull?"

"Yes, I suppose it would, but it seems to me a suitable place where two young women may meditate on what they are going to do with their lives."

"Yes, that's an important question for the two. I say, Dorothy, let's take the other side of the river and enter Vassar college. Then we should at least have some fun, and there would be some reasonably well educated people to speak to."

"Oh, you wish to use your lately acquired scientific knowledge in order to pass the examinations. But, you see, I have had no tutor to school me in the mysteries of lime burning and the mixing of cement. Now, you have scorned my side of the river, and I have objected to your side of the river. That is the bad beginning which, let us hope, makes the good ending. Who is to arbitrate in our dispute?"

"Why, we'll split the difference, of course."

"How can we do that? Live in a houseboat on the river like Frank Stockton's 'Rudder Grange?'"

"No; settle in the city of New York, which is practically an island in the Hudson."

"Would you like to live in New York?"

"Wouldn't I! Imagine any one having the chance living anywhere else!"

"In a hotel, I suppose—the Halldorf for choice."

"Yes; we could live in a hotel until we found the ideal flat, high up in a nice apartment house, with a view like that from the top of Mount Washington or from the top of the Washington monument."

"But you forget I made one proviso in the beginning, and that is that I am going to build a church, and the church is to be situated not in the city of New York, but in the village of Haverstock."

"New York is just the place from which to construct such an edifice. Haverstock will be somewhere near the West Shore railway. Very well. We can take a trip up there once a week or oftener, if you like, and see how the work is progressing. Then the people of Haverstock will respect us. As we drive from the station they'll say:

"'There's the two young ladies from New York who are building the church.'

"But if we settle down among them they'll think we're only ordinary villagers instead of the distinguished persons we are. Or, while our flat is ready we could live at one of the big hotels in the Catskills and come down as often as we like on the inclined railway. Indeed, until the weather gets colder the Catskills is the place.

"And, lo, the Catskills print the distant sky,
And o'er their airy tops the faint clouds driven,
So softly blending that the cheated eye
Forgets or which is earth or which is heaven."

"That ought to carry the day for the Catskills, Kate. What sort of habitation shall we choose, a big hotel or a select private boarding house?"

"Oh, a big hotel, of course—the biggest there is, whatever its name may be—one of those whose rates are so high that the proprietor daren't advertise them, but says in his announcement, 'For terms apply to the manager.' It must have ample grounds, support an excellent band and advertise a renowned cuisine. Your room at least should have a private balcony, on which you can place a telescope and watch the building of your church down below. I, being a humble person in a subordinate position, should have a balcony also to make up for those deficiencies."

"Very well, Kate; that's settled. But, although two lone women may set up housekeeping in a New York flat, they cannot very well go alone to a fashionable hotel."

"Oh, yes, we can. Best of references given and required."

"I was going to suggest," pursued Dorothy, not noticing the interruption, "that we invite your father and mother to accompany us. They might enjoy a change from sea air to mountain air."

Katherine frowned a little and demurred.

"Are you going to be fearfully conventional, Dorothy?"

"We must pay some attention to the conventions, don't you think?"

"I had hoped not. I yearn to be a bachelor girl and own a latchkey."

"We shall each possess a latchkey when we settle down in New York. Our flat will be our castle, and, although our latchkey will let us in, our Yale lock will keep other people out. A noted summer resort calls for different treatment, because there we lead a semipublic life. Besides, I am selfish enough to wish my coming out to be under the auspices of so well known a man as Captain Kempt."

"All right; I'll see what they say about it. You don't want Sabina, I take it."

"Yes, if she will consent to come."

"I doubt if she will, but I'll see. Besides, now that I come to think about it, it's only fair I should allow my doting parents to know that I am about to desert them."

With that Katherine quitted the room and went down the stairs hippety-hop.

Dorothy drew the letter from its place of concealment and read it for the third time, although one not interested might have termed it a most commonplace document. It began, "Dear Miss Amhurst," and ended, "Yours most sincerely, Alan Drummond." It gave some account of his doings since he bade goodby to her. A sailor, he informed her, needs little time for packing his belongings, and on the occasion in question the prince had been of great assistance. They set out together for the early morning train and said "au revoir" at the station. Drummond had intended to sail from New York, but a friendly person whom he met on the train informed him that the Liverpool liner Enthusiana set out from Boston next day, so he had abandoned the New York idea and had taken passage on the liner named, on whose note paper he wrote the letter, which epistle was once more concealed as Dorothy heard Katherine's light step on the stair.

That impulsive young woman burst into the sewing room.

"We're all going," she cried—"father, mother and Sabina. It seems father has had an excellent offer to let the house furnished till the end of September, and he says that as he likes high life he will put in the time on the top of the Catskills. He abandons me and says that if he can borrow a shilling he is going to cut me off with it in his will. He regrets the departure of the British fleet, because he thinks he might have been able to raise a real English shilling aboard. Dad only insists on one condition—namely, that he is to pay for himself, mother and Sabina, so he does not want a room with a balcony. I said that in spite of his disinheritance I'd help the family out of my salary, and so he is going to reconsider the changing of his will."

"We will settle the conditions when we reach the Catskills," said Dorothy, smiling.

CHAPTER VII.

CAPTAIN and Mrs. Kempt, with Sabina, had resided a week in the Matterhorn hotel before the two girls arrived there. They had gone direct to New York, and it required the seven days to find a flat that suited them, of which they were to take possession on the 1st of October. Then there were the lawyers to see, a great many business details to settle and an architect to consult. After leaving New York the girls spent a day at Haverstock, where Dorothy Amhurst bought a piece of land as shrewdly as if she had been in the real estate business all her life. After this transaction the girls drove to the station on the line connecting with the inclined railway and so, as Katherine remarked, were "wafted to the skies on flowery beds of ease," which she explained to her shocked companion was all right because it was a quotation from a hymn. When at last they reached their hotel, Katherine was in ecstasies.

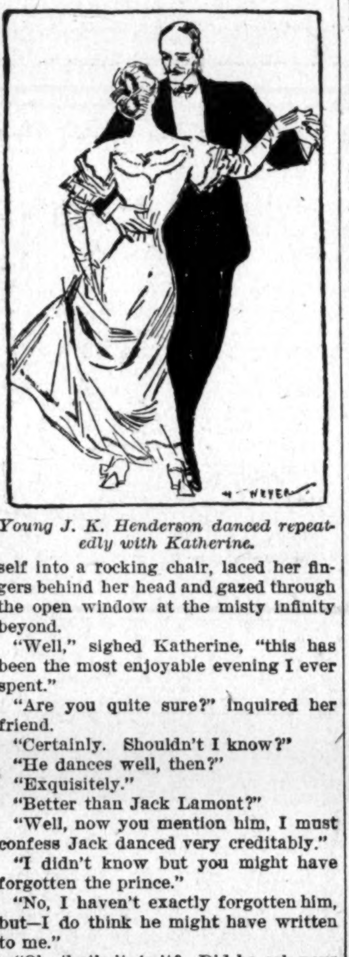
"Isn't this Heavenly?" she cried. "And, indeed, it ought to be, for I understand we are 3,000 feet higher than we were in New York, and even the skyscrapers can't compete with such an altitude."

The broad valley of the Hudson lay spread beneath them, stretching as far as the eye could see, shimmering in the thin, bluish veil of a summer evening, and miles away the river itself could be traced like a silver ribbon.

The gallant captain, who had been energetically browbeaten by his younger daughter and threatened with divers pains and penalties should he fail to pay attention and take heed to instructions, had acquitted himself with eclat in the selection of rooms for Dorothy and his daughter. The suit was situated in one corner of the huge caravansary, a large parlor occupying the angle, with windows on one side looking into the forest and on the other giving an extended view across the valley. The front room adjoining the parlor was to be Dorothy's very own, and the end room belonged to Katherine, he said, as long as she behaved herself. If Dorothy ever wished to evict her strenuous neighbor, all she had to do was to call upon the captain, and he would lend his aid, at which proffer of assistance Katherine tossed her head and said she would try the room for a week and if she didn't like it out Dorothy would have to go.

There followed days and nights of revelry—hops, concerts, entertainments of all sorts, with a more pretentious ball on Saturday night, when the week-tired man from New York arrived in the afternoon to find temperature 20 degrees lower and the altitude very much higher than was the case in his busy office in the city. Katherine reveled in this round of excitement, and, indeed, so, in a milder way, did Dorothy. After the functions were over the girls enjoyed a comforting chat with one another in their drawing room, all windows open, and the moon a-shining down over the luminous valley, which it seemed to fill with mother of pearl dust.

Young J. K. Henderson of New York, having danced repeatedly with Katherine on Saturday night, unexpectedly turned up for the hop on the following Wednesday, when he again danced repeatedly with the same joyous girl. It being somewhat unusual for a keen business man to take a four hours' journey during an afternoon in the middle of the week and as a consequence arrive late at his office next morning, Dorothy began to wonder if a concrete formation, associated with the name of Prince Ivan Lermontoff of Russia, was strong enough to stand an energetic assault of this nature, supposing it were to be constantly repeated. It was after midnight on Wednesday when the two reached the corner parlor. Dorothy sat in a cane armchair, while Katherine threw herself into a rocking chair, laced her fingers behind her head and gazed through the open window at the misty infinity beyond.



Young J. K. Henderson danced repeatedly with Katherine.

"Well," sighed Katherine, "this has been the most enjoyable evening I ever spent."

"Are you quite sure?" inquired her friend.

"Certainly. Shouldn't I know?"

"He dances well, then?"

"Exquisitely."

"Better than Jack Lamont?"

"Well, now you mention him, I must confess Jack danced very creditably."

"I didn't know but you might have forgotten the prince."

"No, I haven't exactly forgotten him, but—I do think he might have written to me."

"Oh, that's it, is it? Did he ask your permission to write?"

"Good gracious, no! We never talked of writing. Old red sandstone, rather, was our topic of conversation. Still he might have acknowledged receipt of the book."

"But the book was given to him in return for the one he presented to you."

"Yes, I suppose it was. I hadn't thought of that."

"Then again, Kate, Russian notions regarding writing to young ladies may differ from ours, or he may have fallen overboard or touched a live wire."

"Yes, there are many possibilities," murmured Katherine dreamily.

"It seems rather strange that Mr. Henderson should have time to come up here in the middle of the week."

"Why is it strange?" asked Katherine. "Mr. Henderson is not a clerk bound down to office hours. He's an official high up in one of the big insurance companies and gets a simply tremendous salary."

"Really? Does he talk as well as Jack Lamont did?"

"He talks less like the Troy Technical institute and more like the Home Journal than poor Prince Jack did, and, then, he has a much greater sense of humor. When I told him that the oath of an insurance man should be 'bet your life!' he laughed. Now, Jack would never have seen the point that. Anyhow, the hour is too late and I am too sleepy to worry about young men or jokes either. Good night!"

Next morning's mail brought Dorothy a bulky letter decorated with English stamps. She locked the door, tore open the envelope and found many sheets of thin paper bearing the heading of the Bluewater club, Pall Mall.

"I am reminded of an old adage," she read, "to the effect that one should never cross a bridge before arriving at it. Since I bade goodby to you up to this very evening I have been plodding over a bridge that didn't exist, much to my own discomfort. You were with me when I received the message ordering me home to England, and I don't know whether or not I succeeded in suppressing all signs of my own perturbation, but we have in the navy now a man who does not hesitate to overturn a court martial, and so I feared a reopening of the Rock in the Baltic question, which might have meant the wrecking of my career. I had quite made up my mind, if the worst came to the worst, to go out west and become a cowboy, but a passenger with whom I became acquainted on the Enthusiana informed me, to my regret, that the cowboy is largely a being of the past, to be met with only in the writings of Stewart Edward White, Owen Wister and several other famous men whom he named. So you see I went across the ocean tolerably depressed, finding my present occupation threatened and my future uncertain.

"When I arrived in London, I took a room at this club, of which I have been a member for some years, and reported immediately at the admiralty. But there, in spite of all diligence on my part, I was quite unable to learn what was wanted of me. Of course I could have gone to my uncle, who is in the government, and perhaps he might have enlightened me, although he has nothing to do with the navy, but I rather like to avoid Uncle Metgurne. He brought me up since I was a small boy and seems unnecessarily ashamed of the result. It is his son who is the attache in St. Petersburg that I spoke to you about."

Dorothy ceased reading for a moment.

"Metgurne, Metgurne," she said to herself. "Surely I know that name."

She laid down the letter, pressed the electric button and unlocked the door. When the servant came, she said:

"Will you ask at the office if they have any biographical book of reference relating to Great Britain and, if so, please bring it to me?"

The servant appeared shortly after with a red book which proved to be an English "Who's Who" dated two years back. Turning the pages, she came to Metgurne.

"Metgurne, twelfth Duke of, created 1631, Herbert George Alan." Here followed a number of other titles, the information that the son and heir was Marquis of Thaxted and belonged to the diplomatic service; that Lord Metgurne was H. M. secretary of state for royal dependencies; finally a list of residences and clubs. She put down the book and resumed the letter.

"I think I ought to have told you that when I reach St. Petersburg I shall be as anxious to avoid my cousin Thaxted as I am to steer clear of his father in London. So I sat in my club and read the papers. Dear me, this is evidently going to be a very long letter. I hope you won't mind. I think perhaps you may be interested in learning how they do things over here.

"After two or three days of anxious waiting there came a crushing communication from the admiralty which confirmed my worst fears and set me at crossing the bridge again. I was ordered to report next morning at 11 at committee room 5 in the admiralty and bring with me full particulars pertaining to the firing of gun number so-and-so of the Consternation's equipment on such a date. I wonder since that I did not take to drink. We have every facility for that sort of thing in this club.

"However, at 11 next day I presented myself at the committee room and found in session the grimmest looking five men I have ever yet been called upon to face. Collectively they were about ten times worse in appearance than the courtmartial I had previously encountered. Four of the men I did not know, but the fifth I recognized at once, having often seen his portrait. He is Admiral Sir John Pendergest, popularly known in the service as 'Old Grouch,' a blue terror who knows absolutely nothing of mercy. The lads in the service say he looks so disagreeable because he is sorry he was not born a hanging judge. Picture a face as cleanly cut as that of some severe old Roman senator, a face as hard as marble, quite as cold and nearly as white, rescued from the appearance of a death mask by a pair of piercing eyes that glitter like steel. When looking at him it is quite impossible to believe that such a personage has ever been a boy who played pranks on his masters. Indeed, Admiral Sir John Pendergest seems to have sprung, fully uniformed and forbidding, from the earth, like those soldiers of mythology. I was so taken aback at confronting such a man that I never noticed my old friend, Billy Richardson, seated at the table as one of the minor officials of the committee. Billy tells me I looked rather white about the lips when I realized what was ahead of me, and I dare say he was right. My consolation is that I didn't get red, as is my disconcerting habit. I was accommodated with a chair, and then a ferrety faced little man began asking me questions, consulting every now and then a foolscap sheet of paper which was before him. Others were ready to note down the answers.

"'When did you fire the new gun Consternation in the Baltic?'

Amhurst. I have confessed to you that I am not brilliant, and, indeed, such confession was quite unnecessary, for you must speedily have recognized the fact, but here let me boast for a line or two of my one accomplishment, which is mathematical accuracy. When I make experiments I don't note the result by rule of thumb. My answer to the ferret faced man was prompt and complete.

"'At twenty-three minutes, seventeen seconds past 10 a. m., on May the 3d of this year,' was my reply.

"The five high officials remained perfectly impassive, but the two stenographers seemed somewhat taken by surprise, and one of them whispered, 'Did you say fifteen seconds, sir?'

"'He said seventeen,' growled Sir John Pendergest in a voice that seemed to come out of a sepulcher.

"'Who sighted the gun?'

"'I did, sir.'

"'Why did not the regular gunner do that?'

"'He did, sir, but I also took observations and raised the muzzle .000327 of an inch.'

"'Was your gunner inaccurate, then, to that extent?'

"'No, sir; but I had weighed the ammunition and found it short by two ounces and thirty-seven grains.'

"I must not bore you with all the questions and answers. I merely give these as samples. They questioned me about the recoil, the action of the gun, the state of this, that and the other after firing, and luckily I was able to answer to a dot every query put to me. At the finish one of the judges asked me to give in my own words my opinion of the gun. Admiral Sir John glared at him as he put this question, for of course to any expert the answers I had furnished, all taken together, gave an accurate verdict on the gun, assuming my statements to have been correct, which I maintained they were. However, as Sir John made no verbal comment I offered my opinion as tersely as I could.

"'Thank you, Lieutenant Drummond,' rumbled Sir John in his deep voice, as if he were pronouncing sentence, and, my testimony completed, the committee rose.

"I was out in the street before Billy Richardson overtook me, and then he called himself to my attention by a resounding slap on the shoulder.

"'Alan, my boy,' he cried, 'you have done yourself proud. Your fortune's made.'

"'As how?' I asked, shaking him by the hand.

"'Why, we've been for weeks holding an inquiry on this blessed gun, and the question is whether or not a lot more of them are to be made. You know what an opinionated beast Old Grouch is. Well, my boy, you have corroborated his opinion of the gun in every detail. He is such a brow beating, tyrannical brute that the rest of the committee would rather like to go against him if they dared, but you have put a spoke in their wheel. Why, Sir John never said "thank you" to a human being since he was born until twenty-seven minutes and fifteen seconds after 11 this morning, as you would put it,' and at the time of writing this letter this surmise of Billy's appears to be justified, for the tape in the club just now announced that the committee has unanimously decided in favor of the gun, and adds that this is regarded as a triumph for the chairman, Admiral Sir John Pendergest, with various letters after his name.

"Dear Miss Amhurst, this letter, as I feared, has turned out intolerably long, and, like our first conversation, it is all about myself. But then, you see, you are the only one on the other side of the water to whom I have confided my selfish worries, and I believe you to be so kind hearted that I am sure you will not censure me for this once exceeding the limits of friendly correspondence. Having been deeply depressed during all the previous long days, the sudden reaction urges me to go out into Pall Mall, fling my cap in the air and whoop, which action is quite evidently a remnant of my former cowboy aspirations. Truth to tell, the Russian business seems already forgotten except by my stout old captain on the Consternation or my uncle. The strenuous Sir John has had me haled across the ocean merely to give testimony, lasting about thirty-five minutes, when, with a little patience, he might have waited till the Consternation herself arrived or else have cabled for us to try the gun at Bar Harbor. I suppose, however, that after my unfortunate contretemps with Russia our government was afraid I'd chip a corner off the United States and that they'd have to pay for it. So perhaps, after all, it was greater economy to bring me across on the liner Enthusiana.

"By the way, I learned yesterday that the Consternation has been ordered home, and so I expect to see Jack Lamont before many days are past. The ship will be paid off at Portsmouth, and then I suppose he and I will have our freedom for six months. I am rather looking forward to Jack's cooking me some weird but tasteful Russian dishes when we reach his blacksmith's shop in St. Petersburg. If I get on in Russia, as I hope and expect, I shall spend the rest of my leave over in the States. I saw very little indeed of that great country and am extremely anxious to see more. When one is on duty aboard ship one can only take very short excursions ashore. I should like to visit Niagara. It seems ridiculous that one should have been all along the American coast from Canada to New York and never have got far enough inland to view the great falls.

"Russia is rather dilatory in her methods, but I surely should know within two or three weeks whether I am going to succeed or not. If not, then there is no use in waiting there, I shall try to persuade the prince to accompany me to America. During the weeks I am waiting in St. Petersburg I shall continually impress upon him the utter futility of a life which has not investigated the great electrical power plant at Niagara Falls. And then he is interested in the educational system of the United States. While we were going to the station early that morning he told me that the United States educational system must be the most wonderful in the world, because he found that your friend, Miss Katherine Kempt, knew more about electricity, metallurgy, natural philosophy and a great number of other things he is interested in than all the ladies he has met in Europe put together. He thinks that's the right sort of education for girls, and all this rather astonished me, because, although your friend was most charming, she said nothing during my very short acquaintance with her to lead me to suspect that she had received a scientific training.

"Dear Miss Amhurst, I am looking every day for a letter from you, but none has yet been received by the admiralty, who when they get one will forward it to whatever part of the world I happen to be in."

Wilmiugton Evidence

For Wilmington People

EVERYTHING ELSE FAILED BUT RICHARDS FOR THIS CASE

The proof is the cure. The cure is in your own midst. Not away off amongst strangers. The strong claims for Dr. Richards Dyspepsia Tablets are established in Wilmington by Wilmington cures. Here is one of them:

Mary A. Sidbury, 706 Castle street, Wilmington, N. C., says

Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablet Association, 53 and 55 Worth street, New York.

Gentlemen:

"This medicine which I got at Dr. Green's Drug Store, benefitted me in a stubborn case of indigestion where other remedies failed. I desire to state, it is the best I have ever come across."

Yours truly,
MARY A. SIDBURY,
706 Castle Street, Wilmington, N. C.

Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablets 50 cents a bottle.

Dr. Richards' Laxocomfits 25 cents a bottle.

HUNGER AND FEAR OF FOOD

Hungry, consequently enfeebled, unless that hunger is appeased. This is the result of a dyspeptic condition where hunger is preferred to the distress and misery that come after eating.

You will get hungry but you need have no fear from eating a hearty meal to satisfy that hunger if you use Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablets. They make good digestion wait on appetite and health on both.

Mrs. M. A. Futch, 13 Wooster street, Wilmington, N. C., says:

"I am very much pleased with the results obtained since using your remedy and am happy to state that I am now all right, enjoying my usual good health. I was so weak and in such a run-down condition that it was with difficulty that I kept up and around. I could scarcely eat anything although I was ravenously hungry all the time. I got a bottle at Dr. Green's Drug store and after a good, thorough trial, for I went at them with a determination to get well, I find them to be as represented. One splendid thing in their favor is, that you experience no bad after effects from them."

Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablets, 50 cents per bottle.

Dr. Richards' Laxocomfits, 25 cents per bottle.

NO SIGN NOW OF NERVOUS HEADACHES.

Whoever has suffered from one of those severe nervous headaches can read the statement given below and find the same relief as Mrs. Cowan obtained. All that is needed is a trial of Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablets. They possess marvelous curative powers.

Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablet Association, 53 and 55 Worth street, New York.

Gentlemen:

Up to two months ago, before I began taking Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablets, I suffered greatly from nervous dyspepsia and severe headaches. I got so use to have these headaches once a week I was almost distracted. The medicine I took did not seem to do me any good. I heard Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablets spoken of very highly and I got a bottle at Dr. Green's Drug Store. I have taken this bottle of these little tablets and have not had a sign of a headache for a month. My appetite is good; that old nervous feeling has gone and I am at last feeling like myself again thanks to Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablets.

Yours truly,
MRS. M. O. COWAN,
708 Bladen Street, Wilmington, N. C.

WILMINGTON DYSPEPTICS.

Sufferers from Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Constriction and Constipation have not only black Fridays but about every day in the seven is of that funeral hue. Consequently they do not enjoy life. They do not laugh very often. They are to be pitied and if possible helped.

The greatest help to them would be a cure. How life puts on a new color scheme to such victims is demonstrated by the use of Dr. Richards Dyspepsia Tablets. Read the following evidence.

Mary Edwards, 614 Harnet street, Wilmington, N. C.

"Since I began taking your tablets my improvement has been such that I feel as though I can claim a complete cure. Previous to taking your remedy I had no ambition for anything. My stomach had bothered me for years, finally getting in such a condition, that it was impossible for me to be able to partake of anything but the lightest of foods and even then it would cause me great distress. I had heard Dr. Richards' Dyspepsia Tablets spoken of by a resident of this town and I went to Dr. Green's Drug store and procured a package and have since been taking them regularly. I honestly think them the best tablets for the stomach troubles of all kinds and sincerely recommend their use."

THE COTTON MARKET.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

New York, June 22.—The cotton market opened steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 6 points, July being the only month unchanged. Cables were lower than expected, the week-end figures disappointing, weekly crop reviews bearish, and while the expected rains in the Western belt did not show on the early map, conditions otherwise were favorable. The active new crop months sold off to a net decline of 6 to 7 points shortly after the opening, but the relative strength of July checked selling to some extent and prices rallied later in the morning on covering, with July selling 2 to 3 points net higher, while the new crop held only a point or two under last night's finals. The cotton market closed with prices net 1 to 12 points lower.

Receipts at the ports today, 1,532 bales, against 2,251 last week, and 2,432 last year. For the week estimated 25,000 bales, against 25,948 last week and 30,798 last year. Today's receipts at New Orleans, 528, against 363 last year, and at Houston, 231 bales, against 562 last year.

Spot cotton closed firm; middling uplands 12.85; middling gulf 13.10; sales 250 bales. Futures opened steady and closed barely steady.

FAMILY DISPUTES.

How They Were Once Settled by Fair Fight In Court.

In some parts of Germany in days gone by when the relations of husband and wife became strained, so to speak—in other words, when each returning day gave birth to new squabbles and the man's hand was as ready as the woman's tongue—the couple were brought before the magistrate, who, after listening to recriminations, ordered them to prepare for the ordeal by battle. The man was placed in a cask, which was then nearly filled with sand, so that he was covered up to the waist. In some towns a pit was kept handy for the purpose, just as the ducking stool was kept on Bankside, opposite St. Paul's. When he was thus half buried, the man received a short stick for his right hand, while his left hand was tied up across his chest. He was thus one armed and could only deliver his blows if his opponent came near enough.

The lady put on a linen garment, the right sleeve of which was lengthened. In the end was tied up a stone. The sleeve projected about twelve inches beyond her hand. She had thus a formidable weapon, but in order to use it she had to get close to her enemy. Now, observe the situation and the chances. If she succeeded in bringing the stone down upon her husband's head, she might knock him senseless; she might even brain him, but in order to do so she would expose herself to the full blow of his stick. The battle might, in fact, be settled by a single assault. But mark the craftiness of man. It was better to make a woman ridiculous than to knock her silly. The husband, therefore, if he was a philosopher, did not try to hit his wife. He warded her blows with his stick. He tried to catch the sleeve upon his stick. Then the stone flew round and round, and the lady was caught. She could not move, and the victorious husband dragged her, unwilling, head first into his cask.—London Queen.

TELESCOPE LENSES.

Astonishing Sensitiveness of These Wonderful Glasses.

With the exception of astronomers, few persons have any idea of the wonderful sensitiveness of the lens of a telescope. These marvelous artificial eyes can be produced only by the exercise of the most scrupulous care in the selection of the glass itself, consummate skill and inexhaustible patience. The process of grinding and polishing often occupies several months. When the lens of a big telescope is completed, it constitutes one of the greatest marvels wrought by man.

An article in the Literary Digest describes how the sensitiveness of a lens was illustrated by Alvan Clark, the greatest lensmaker America has produced:

Mr. Clark walked down to the lens and held his hand under it about two feet away. Instantaneously a marvelous spectacle burst into view. It seemed as if the great glass disk had become a living volcano, spurting forth jets of flame.

The display was dazzling. Waving, leaping, dancing, the countless tongues of light gleamed and vibrated; then fitfully, reluctantly, they died away, leaving the lens reflecting only a pure, untroubled light.

What is it? How do you account for the wonder? were the eager questions. It is only the radiation of heat alternately expanding and contracting the glass. If the hand had been put upon the lens itself, the phenomenon would have been more violent.

To a person ignorant of lenses the almost supernatural sensitiveness of a mass of glass weighing several hundred pounds is astonishing, but to the scientist it is an everyday matter, for he has instruments that will register with unfaltering nicety the approach of a person fifty or a hundred feet away.

His Share.

A gamekeeper found a boy fishing in his master's private waters.

"You mustn't fish here!" he exclaimed. "These waters belong to the Earl of A."

"Do they? I didn't know that," replied the culprit, laying aside his rod. He then took up a book and commenced reading.

The keeper departed, but on returning about an hour afterward found the same youth had started fishing again.

"Do you understand that this water belongs to the Earl of A.?" he roared.

"Why, you told me that an hour ago!" exclaimed the angler, in surprise. "Surely the whole river doesn't belong to him? His share went by long ago!"—London Telegraph.

No Hessians Need Apply.

Aunt Sally Linnekin was looking admiringly at a collection of souvenir postal cards brought back from Europe by one of her summer boarders.

"Now, this one," said he, showing a handsome card, "is from Hesse, where those Hessian soldiers came from, you know."

Aunt Sally put down the cards and rose up in intense indignation.

"Land sakes!" she exclaimed in horror. "Did you go there?"

No Secret.

"Well, well," exclaimed Miss Passay, "so she's twenty-five today. I guess it would surprise her if I should tell her I was the same age."

"Oh, no," replied Miss Knox; "she knows that, of course."

"She knows that I'm twenty-five?"

"No; that you were."—Philadelphia Press.

STATE'S CASE AGAINST HAYWOOD

Summary of Evidence Against Officials of Western Federatino of Miners.

STRONG POINTS PRODUCED

Orchard's Story of Crime Corroberated at Many Points, Showing Conspiracy to Assassinate Gov. Steunenberg and Others.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

Boise, Idaho, June 22.—The closing of the case of the State, leaves the battle against and for the life of William D. Haywood in midfield and from now forward the sides change, the defense assumes the agressive, the prosecution is on the defensive. The State will carry its case on through an aggressive cross-examination and then present testimony in rebuttal, but its main proposition and showing are already before the jury. As to the Steunenberg crime, which is the one specially charged against Haywood, the State has made the following showing:

Jack Simpkins, member of the executive board of the Western Federation of Miners, went to Caldwell three months before Steunenberg was murdered. He traveled under the assumed name of Simmons, and lived with Orchard. He left Caldwell at the end of a week's stay and later returned for a brief visit of less than a day.

Haywood sent $100 to Simpkins on December 21, 1905, nine days before the murder of Steunenberg, in an unsigned letter, sent from Denver on December 30, 1905, and showing by the writer knew the address of Harry Orchard, contained the statement that "that" had been sent to "Jack," on December 21, 1905. Orchard testified that Pettibone, one of Haywood's codefendants, wrote the letter. Without making any request, legal aid was exits address to "Thomas Hogan," that tended to Orchard within two days after his arrest.

Four letters were sent to Mrs. Orchard, the second at Cripple Creek, three by Orchard and one by haywood, at various times in 1905, and it is said that they not only showed evidence of a plan to conceal Orchard's whereabouts from his wife, but was part of a plan to make an alibi for him. Orchard swore that Haywood was a party to the plan and that to carry it out Paddy Mullany, a member of the Federation at Cripple Creek, undertook to deliver the two letters he wrote at Denver, and dated at San Francisco and that Warren Moore, a member of the Federation board, carried the third letter to Nome, Alaska, and there mailed it. The letter, which was produced with its envelope, bore the post mark of Nome,. Haywood's letter to Mrs. Orchard bore the date of November, 1905, at which time Orchard and Simpkins were at Caldwell, and made the statement that the last the writer had heard of Orchard he was in Alaska.

Haywood, Pettibone and Orchard are placed together on two or three occasions in Denver, between the Spring and Fall of 1905, and Orchard lived at Pettibone's house as a guest during the month of August, 1905.

Articles from the Miners' Magazine and some testimony as to the Couer d'Alene strike of 1899 show animus toward Steunenberg on the part of Haywood and other leaders of the Federation. On the general conspiracy set up in the allegation by the State, the showing has been as follows:

Orchard has been traced through all of the more important movements connected with the alleged attempt on the life of Fred Bradley at Dan Francisco, by independent witnesses. It has been independently shown that while Orchard was at San Francisco Pettibone, using false names, telegraphed money to him twice and that a registered letter or package was sent to San Francisco from Pettibone's Denver address under a name used by Pettibone in sending one of the telegraphic remittances. Other than by Orchard's word, it has not been shown that the Bradley explosion was caused by a bomb.

The casing of the socalled Peabody bomb has been produced and its history largely provided by outside witnesses from the time it was made in Denver until it was recovered out of the ice covered Couer d'Alene river. Miss Peabody confirmed one detail of the story Orchard told of one of the attempts to shoot her father, and Orchard's story of his journey to Canyon City to kill former Governor Peabody is given general confirmation by the testimony of William Vaughan, who was Orchard's traveling companion. Orchard went to Canyon City ostensibly as an insurance agent and the State has produced a letter of recommendation written to the insurance company for him by Pettibone.

The discovery of the Goddard bomb has established, but the earlier history of the bomb and all of the plot centering around it rests on the testimony of Orchard.

The chief corroboration of Orchard's testimony has been as to things he did and the time and manner of their doing, and it is contended by the defense that aside from his testimony there is not a single piece of independent evidence against Haywood, or any fact that independently connects Haywood with the crime charged or any other crime.

Counsel for Haywood will not outline their defense until Monday morning, but their course during the cross-examination, make their general course clear. It is manifest that they will endeavor to show that Orchard killed Steunenberg to be revenged for the loss of the Hercules mine, and several witnesses will swear that they heard Orchard tell the Hercules tale and vow that he would kill Steunenberg. They will probably show also that Jack Simpkins was a prisoner in the "bull pen" where a negro thrust a bayonet into his chest, circumstances that gave the two common causes against Steunenberg.

There will likely be a showing that all of the financial relations of Haywood and Simpkins came in the natural course and regular course of conducting the business affairs of the Federation.

Orchard's testimony as to the alleged intimacy of himself and the Federation leaders and his story of the events at Cripple Creek, extending from the first attempt at the indicator down to the destruction of the Independence station, will probably be directly contradicted on the stand by practically all the men named by him.

SAN FRANCISCO'S STRIKE OUTLOOK

Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies Declare It Has Improved.

ONE THIRD OF MEN AT WORK

Business in Some Respects Crippled, But More Telegraphers Are Applying for Work—Strikers are Organizing Campaign.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

San Francisco, June 22.—Superintendent A. H. May, of the Western Union Telegraph Company, said today that the strike situation had improved somewhat, and, in fact, was better than had been expected. Between fifty and sixty operators were at work—nearly one-third of the usual force, and considerable business was being handled. Applications for employment were coming in and a speedy increase of the number of men at work was expected, referring to statements made yesterday by President Small, of the Telegraphers' Union, Mr. May said:

"The assertion that we have refused to treat with our own employes is absolutely untrue. We have always and always will give their claims full consideration. Neither has the company repeatedly refused requests for increased wages, as Mr. Small stated. No requests for an increase has reached me. I may add that in many instances we have raised salaries, in some instances above the rate demanded by the union."

General Superintendent W. L. Storer, of the Postal Telegraph Company, said:

"We are tiding over the trouble very well, considering the circumstances. Nearly one-third of our former office force is on duty and business is being handled, of course, subject to delay. The outlook is encouraging."

All the private wires to brokers' offices were out of commission and the wires to the Merchants' Exchange, the Mining Exchange and the San Francisco Stock and Bank Exchange were not working. The strike had no effect upon prices at any of the exchanges, however.

The striking commercial telegraph operators at San Francisco and Oakland met today at the union headquarters in Oakland to plan a campaign. The meeting appointed an executive committee and assigned pickets to the various telegraph offices affected by the strike. The officers of the union received many telegrams from various unions in other parts of the country endorsing the stand taken by the local union and promisig aid in any form needed.

As Viewed in New York.

New York, June 22.—Contrary to expectation, no meeting of the executive committee of the Telegraphers' Union wah held today. A number of the members were present at headquarters in the Astor House, but the meeting was postponed on account of the non-arrival of J. Reidy, of Boston, a member of the committee. It was stated that the meeting might be held tomorrow.

Deputy President S. J. Konenkamp, of the Telegraphers' Union, denied today the interview in which he was reported as saying that President Small would be disciplined because the San Francisco strike was called after the Telegraphers' Union had reached an agreement with the telegraph companies through the efforts of Labor Commissioner Neill. Mr. Konenkamp made the following statement:

"The strike at San Francisco had been legally authorized by the board last Friday before the companies showed a disposition to accede to anything. Since making my official report to President Small I have not been able to get in touch with him and have nothing but newspaper reports to go on."

LIQUORS ARE POISONOUS

Government Officials Seize Stock of Ten Saloons at Augusta.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Augusta, Ga., June 22.—Acting under the pure food and drug act, the revenue authorities are making an investigation of foods offered for sale in the bar rooms of this city, and have developed the fact that a large percentage of the stuff is heavily adulterated, some of it being graded as almost posionous. Seizures have been made at ten bar rooms and the goods turned over to the United States Commissioner Goodwin. There have been no arrests as yet, but further developments are expected upon the return o fthe officers.

SHOT PASSENGERS ON CHAIR CAR

Terrible Deed of Italian Czazed With Drink on Western Train.

THREE VICTIMS OF PISTOL

One Man Shot Dead and Two Women Wounded—Man Imagined That He Was Being Robbed. Fought Desperately.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

Denver, Co., June 22.—In a shooting affray that occurred in a chair car of passenger train No. 51 westbound on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad last night between Dresden and Selden, in western Kansas, T. B. Tipp, of Minneapolis, Minn., was killed, and Mrs. Morris Alzen and her sister, Mrs. Harry Blakesley, both of Arriba, Col., were wounded. The shots were fired by John Bells, an Italian barber, en route from Boston to San Francisco, who had boarded the train at Chicago Thursday night.

Five shots were fired in rapid succession by Bells as he walked through the aisle from the front to the rear of the car, taking aim at one passenger after another. The first shot struck Mrs. Olsen on the left side of the face, the bullet passing through the jaws. Mrs. Olsen's sister, Mrs. Harry Blakesley, sitting opposite her, was hit in the right shoulder with the second bullet. Their wounds are not fatal. Bells' next bullet passed through Mr. Tapp's heart. Charles A. Gilliatt, of Denver, closed in on Bells and wrenched his revolver from his hands, not before two more shots had been fired, neither of which took effect. Bells then drew a razor and with this he fought desperately. A negro porter, armed with a billy, finally succeeded in knocking the razor out of the Italian's hand and Bells was then seized and bound. The train crew stayed out of the car while the disturbance was in progress.

At Goodland, Kan., Bells was removed from the train and locked up in jail. Bells' wife said he had been drinking vermouth all day. About 8 o'clock they fell asleep. At 10:30 Bells awoke and began protesting wildly that some one was trying to rob him. Then he rushed up the aisle and began shooting.

FAST TRAIN WRECKED

Conductor Killed and Nine People Badly Injured.

(By Wire to the Morning Star.)

Pittsburg, Pa., June 22.—Pittsburg and Lake Erie passenger train No. 156 on the Pittsburg, McKeesport and Youghiogheny division, southbound, ran into an open switch at south 21st street, about six o'clock this evening and two coaches were wrecked. The conductor, Joseph Wright, of West Newton, Pa., was killed, and nine passengers were seriously injured. It is said three will die. A defective switch is thought to have caused the accident.

The train consisted of an engine, baggage car, smoker and day coach, was well filled with passengers and was running fast. At a switch leading to a siding the rear truck of the smoker left the rails and swerved to the right in the direction of the switch. The locomotive and baggeg car broke from the smoker and coach and proceeded along the right track. The two last cars, however, were thrown against a gondola car, heavily loaded with steel billets. The right side of both cars was cleanly torn away. All the injured were sitting on this side of the cars. A general alarm for ambulance was sounded, it being reported that between twenty and thirty passengers were dead. Tousands of persons were at the scene within a few minutes and greatly retarded the work of rescue.
